Allen gaining strength, aims for Gulf

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hurricane Allen, gaining fury and described as the strongest on record in the western Caribbean, churned toward Mexico's Yucatan Channel today on a path that could put the killer storm off the U.S. Gulf coast by the weekend.

It left behind at least 71 dead and extensive devastation on the fourth day of its rampage through the Caribbean.

Meanwhile, offshore workers spotted a body in the Gulf of Mexico today near where a helicopter with 13 Americans aboard is missing in the storm-tossed seas off Louisiana's southern coast. The 13 were among hundreds of oil drilling rig and production platform workers evacuated in anticipation of the storm.

At 6 a.m. PDT, the U.S. National Weather Service said Allen, with top winds of 273 km/h instead of 249 km/h recorded three hours earlier, was centred 105 nautical miles east-northeast of Cozumel, Mexico.

"Extremely dangerous Allen is wobbling toward the Yucatan Channel," the weather service said, adding that the storm strengthened through the night to make it the strongest ever to reach the western Caribbean. It was moving west northwest at about 25 km/h.

"The projected track of the centre will bring it through the Yucatan Channel but the strengthening and minor wobbles could result in the centre passing over either the extreme western tip of Cuba or the northeast tip of the Yucatan Peninsula," the weather service said. "This should bring extreme winds to both of these areas."

The Texas-Louisiana coast is about 660 nautical miles northwest of the Yucatan and appears to be in the path of Allen, which has basically followed a north-northwest route since building to hurricane force off the eastern Caribbean island of St. Lucia early Monday morning. However, there is no certainty the storm will continue on the same track.

Coast guardsmen using high-powered lights searched the stormy Gulf of Mexico through the night for the helicopter, which was reported missing when it failed to arrive at 7 p.m. Wednesday at an airport 80 nautical miles away from the production platform. A coast guard spokesman said he knew nothing more than the report that a body was spotted by people aboard a civilian work boat.

The Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. said five of its employees were aboard, along with the pilot and seven workers from various offshore oil service companies.

Mexican rig and production workers were also evacuated from Mexico's oil-rich Campeche Bay and port authorities suspended all navigation there and in the Yucatan peninsula, warning ocean-going ships to take "maximum precautions."

The hurricane's latest victims were reported by Havana radio, which said three people were electrocuted — a 30-year-old man and his 14-year-old boy in eastern Cuba and a 36-year-old man in the island country's central region.

Including the three Cubans, Allen's over-all death toll stands at 71.

PACIFIC PRINCESS

LOVELY SIGHT LOOMING behind young fishermen William Strong, 12, and Chris Duggan, 13, is luxury liner Pacific Princess, better known to TV viewers as the Love Boat. She docked Wednesday at Ogden Point and sailed later for San Francisco.

B.C. gov't job freeze thawing

The provincial government's freeze on civil service hiring has begun to thaw before it ever solidified.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday he has started widening the areas of government operations exempted from the freeze.

When he announced the freeze — Curtis called it at the time a "crude instrument of restraint" — three weeks ago, the minister said three ministries — environment, forests and lands, parks and housing — would not be affected.

Curtis now says that within the last 10 days the ministries of agriculture and the provincial secretary have been added to the exemption list and notice of exemption is on its way to yet another, unspecified ministry.

As other belt-tightening measures take effect, the hiring thaw will continue to spread, Curtis told the legislature.

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich wondered why the freeze was announced in the first place since the government apparently has no intention of proceeding with it.

"There is no point to it," said Stupich. "The government either does not know where it is going or it's so far behind in its accounting that it has no idea what's happening."

Curtis originally estimated the government would save $80 million if the hiring freeze was carried through to the end of the fiscal year on March 31.

Stupich said the most that could be accomplished is a saving of $20 million — a drop in the bucket in a $5.8-billion budget.

He reiterated his contention the government is pleading poverty only to convince Ottawa to cough up more money to finance some of Premier Bill Bennett's pet projects.

Cancer threat is everywhere

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seems that everytime you pick up a newspaper, there's a new report about some everyday item that may cause cancer.

Now, the U.S. government says it's true — there's no way to avoid cancer-causing agents.

The report issued Wednesday by the federal department of health and human services said that almost all Americans are exposed — at low levels — to some type of carcinogen.

Cancer, the country's second-largest killer, may take 400,000 lives this year and is one of the most worried-about diseases. The report came in response to a congressional directive to survey all known and suspected carcinogens to which a large number of Americans are exposed.

The study examined 26 drugs, compounds and processes that have been studied by panels of international experts.

Even though the list is long, said Dr. David Rall, it is incomplete.

Rall, director of the national toxicology program, said, "The next report is planned to cover 100 carcinogens and within two years, the report will include all known important carcinogens."

The report found:

— Asbestos is so widely used that the entire population is exposed in some fashion, including about 2.5 million workers who have some daily occupational exposure.

— Benzene, another carcinogen, occurs widely in petroleum and coal tar distillates. It has been used as a paint solvent and in adhesives, dyes and chemical laboratories. It is also used to make other chemicals, plastics, detergents and some pesticides.

Jetliner crashes in Atlantic

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania (AP) — A Romanian jetliner carrying 164 Romanian fishermen crashed in the Atlantic early today just off the coast of this West African country, officials said. Witnesses said as many as 100 people may have been saved.

The official Mauritanian news agency said the jumbo jet of the Russian-made Tupolev series plunged into the sea with no indication the pilot had sent a distress signal.

There was no word on how many crew members were aboard the scheduled flight of Romania's Tarom airlines, but officials said the passenger manifest listed 164 fishermen aboard and no other passengers.

The fishermen were en route to Nouadhibou to relieve the crews on the huge fishing boats that ply the waters off Africa's west coast, a changeover made routinely every three months, officials said.

Cause of the crash was under investigation. The weather in the area was described as acceptable.

Preliminary reports from the Mauritainian news agency said only 20 fishermen were saved. But later, the French airline UTA at Nouadhibou quoted witnesses as saying there were at least 25 known injured and another 70 or 75 passengers who may also have escaped.

No official figures were available.

For unexplained reasons, the plane dipped to the right on approach and plunged into the sea.

A boat from the Mauritanian navy rushed to the scene as did two trawlers. The boats arrived before the plane had completely broken up, while two-thirds of the fuselage was intact and still above water.

In addition to those pulled onto the boats, a number of passengers also managed to swim to shore, complicating the task of compiling exact casualty figures, the official said.

The worst single-plane accident was the crash of a Turkish DC-10 near Paris on March 3, 1974, in which 346 people died.

No I didn't: McGeer You did so: reporter

VANCOUVER (CP) — It began with a cabinet minister who gave a news conference, then said a CBC reporter with questions on another matter was invading his privacy.

It ended with a CBC television cameraman on the floor, Science Minister Pat McGeer denying allegations he knocked the man down, and the reporter saying "look at the film."

Reporter Larry Rose said that McGeer knocked down cameraman Steve Rendall while he attempted to film McGeer's refusal Wednesday to answer questions on a recent consultant's report about a fixed link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

McGeer was at the University of B.C. to announce a one-year, $525,900 grant toward costs of a study of conversion of gasoline-engine cars to natural gas.

The film shows Rose pursuing McGeer down a corridor, asking questions, McGeer whirling towards the camera, and the cameraman going down.

Rendall then photographed a tussle between McGeer and Rose, with Rose shouting: "You don't touch a cameraman."

Then McGeer turned to the camera again, thrust his hand into the lens, retreated behind a door, and accused the CBC team of invading his privacy.

McGeer later apologized, but denied knocking anyone down.

"I didn't push him. I put my hand up (to block the camera) and he fell down." He said his hand rested on Rendall's shoulder.

"You don't put a hand on a cameraman," said Rose.

McGeer was refusing to answer questions concerning provincial consultant Garth Edge's report suggesting a fixed link between the mainland and Vancouver Island is not feasible at this time.

Bank rate up a bit

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate moved up fractionally Thursday to 10.39 per cent from 10.31 per cent a week earlier, the second increase in two weeks, after four months of decline.

West loses again: Phillips

The federal government's refusal to provide $3 a tonne toward a transportation subsidy on coal exported from northeastern B.C. is another instance of the West losing out, says Industry Minister Don Phillips.

Ottawa's decision not to help out on the subsidy — it already has committed money for port development and upgrading of rail facilities — was announced Wednesday at a news conference in Vancouver by Senator Ray Perrault, B.C.'s representative in the federal cabinet.

He said the federal position was not taken to kill the proposed billion-dollar coal deal with Japanese steel industry interests, but because the project should not be supported at taxpayers' expense.

B.C. had asked the federal government to contribute $3 toward a $5-a-tonne subsidy to cover transportation costs in an effort to lower the price of the coal.

The Japanese have offered $75 to $77 a tonne, but Canadian coal companies insist they need $86 a tonne to make their operations profitable.

Perrault said approval of the B.C. request would have meant taxpayers subsidizing coal exports to the tune of $200 million in the

Ranchhouse ripper sought revenge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who used a chainsaw to rip up his 2,440-square-metre, $1.5 million log ranchhouse near Ashcroft, B.C., says he did it to prevent the company that had won possession of the property from getting it.

"They might take my land and everything else I had but they weren't going to take my home," Charles Moar said defiantly in a telephone interview Wednesday from Portland, Ore.

"I had two choices: I could give it to a company which I considered unethical or I could destroy it. My family and I spent 3½ years building that house and lived 20 years on the ranch. There was no way I was going to let the Heller company get the house."

The Walter E. Heller Co. of Canada, with head offices in Chicago, gained possession Friday of the 7,000-acre Moar ranch about 60 kilometres west of Kamloops when the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver ordered foreclosure against the property for non-payment of a claim of more than $4 million.

Moar's trouble began in 1967 when he needed $300,000 to lay irrigation works on his ranch. He used a lumber company he owned, Wolverine Lumber Co., as collateral.

He said the company was successful and had large quantities of logs already decked in the woods, but when he was unable to make payments on his loan, Heller gained control of the lumber company and "ran it into the ground," charging the losses against Moar's land.

"It was my company in name only," Moar said. "They put me completely out of decision making. They lost a fortune and charged it to me."

Debts mounted until Moar found himself about $4.5 million in debt.

He says he consulted lawyers but was told it would cost up to $500 a day to fight Heller. "If I had the money to fight them I would have fought them."

Moar said he was told to sell the land, which he says was appraised at $7 million to $8 million in 1973, but wanted to sell it in one block. He says he at least two prospective buyers were told by Heller to wait until the company gained control of the land before buying.

Moar said he is not anxious to return to B.C. until RCMP make a decision on whether he will be charged.

first six years of operation.

The federal government already has said it will contribute $39 million to a coal shipping terminal at Ridley Island near Prince Rupert, Perrault said, and has promised money for access roads and improving rail lines from the northeast to the coast.

Phillips maintains the payment would not be a subsidy.

"The taxes and economic activity returned to Canada, mainly to the federal government, is $2.5 billion over the life of the contract," he said. "And if that's a subsidy, I'll certainly eat it.

"What Mr. Perrault seems to forget is that the subsidy to Eastern industry in Ontario and Quebec turns out to be a grant, but a grant to a transportation system in Western Canada seems to be interpreted as a subsidy."

Phillips said $70 million was put into the development of the Roberts Bank superport south of Vancouver to handle coal from southeastern B.C.

"Last year, Kaiser paid in taxes alone $106 million. If that wasn't a good investment back in 1962 and '63, I'll eat my shirt."

Premier Bill Bennett has said that B.C. would go it alone in building a $300-million spur line to the northeastern coal deposits.

Test-tube baby plans reported in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says a Quebec City hospital has begun a program to produce the first test-tube baby in North America.

In a dispatch from Quebec City, the newspaper says a team of doctors at Laval University Hospital Centre, led by Dr. Jacques-Emile Rioux, has accepted 12 couples willing to try to become the first North American parents of test-tube babies.

On the team with Rioux, a gynecologist and fertility specialist, are biologist Raymond Lambert and two other doctors, Andre Lemay and Adrien Bastide, hospital officials are quoted as saying.

The program is directed at married women who cannot become pregnant because of a blockage in their fallopian tubes.

Rioux said the program was set up to take advantage of the medical expertise and a sophisticated fertility clinic already available at the hospital.

He would not say what his team has already accomplished.

The process is a delicate one which involves taking a mature egg from a woman, fertilizing it in a laboratory dish with her husband's sperm, then implanting the fertilized egg in the woman.

Actors consider Emmy boycott

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Striking actors are considering boycotting the Emmy Awards presentations Sept. 8 if their strike lasts that long, says a union spokesman who estimates the walkout may continue "all the way into September."

The striking performers unions are also considering setting up widescale picketing at the studios, said Kim Fellner, a representative for the Screen Actors Guild. The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists also is striking.

The strike by 60,000 union members, in its 18th day today, has virtually shut down TV and film production. On Wednesday, 20th Century-Fox said it has cancelled production on a film, Quest for Fire, because of the strike.

The sticking point in the dispute is how to carve up the residual fees paid to actors from income producers get for shows on pay TV and home video cassettes.

Actors want six per cent of producers' revenues beginning with the first dollar. Producers have offered 3.6 per cent, to begin only after a show has run fifteen 24-hour days in two years.

Vets short of vaccine

SEATTLE (AP) — King County veterinarians are running out of vaccine against Parvovirus — a highly contagious and fatal disease among dogs — and advising owners to keep their pets indoors.

New orders for the vaccine have been placed, but they are backlogged and not expected to be filled for three to five weeks, doctors say.

Meanwhile, the disease is reported reaching epidemic proportions in Edmonton.

Edmonton clinics report between two and five dogs in their practices have succumbed during recent weeks.

Thomson acquires Jane's yearbooks

LONDON (AP) — Jane's Publishing Co. Ltd., producers of authoritative annual yearbooks on the world's warships, weapons and aircraft, was bought today by the Toronto-based Thomson Organization in a deal valued at £3 million ($8.1 million)

Thomson, whose widespread holdings include newspapers throughout Britain, the United States and Canada, among them the Victoria Times and Daily Colonist, made the purchase from Jane's previous owners, BPC, a printing and publishing group.

Jane's was founded in 1897 by Fred Jane, a journalist and illustrator with an interest in military affairs. The first book to appear and still the most famous is Jane's Fighting Ships. German U-boats carried copies of it during The Second World War to identify ships on the high seas.

Last month Jane's introduced a bi-monthly magazine entitled Jane's Defence Review.

BPC faced substantial over-all losses this year despite pre-tax profits at Jane's of about £400,000 ($1.08 million) last year.

Jane's has a full-time staff of 40 at its London headquarters and employs many defence experts part-time as editors and advisors.

Eighty per cent of the yearbooks are sold outside Britain with sales reaching tens of thousands, despite the current cost of about £40 ($108) a volume.

Hydro faces $5M cost hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rate increase Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. wants for transportation of natural gas would add $5 million a year to B.C. Hydro's costs, the Crown corporation told a National Energy Board hearing Wednesday.

Westcoast is asking the NEB to increase its before-tax return on its rate base to 19.33 per cent from the current 16.94-per-cent base. The company said the increase would provide a return on common equity of 15.5 per cent.

Current authorized rate of return is 14.25 per cent but Westcoast said it has not been possible to reach this level because of high interest rates.

Westcoast buys natural gas from the B.C. Petroleum Corp. and sells it to Hydro, Inland Natural Gas Co. and Pacific Northern Gas Co., which sell it to consumers. Westcoast also sells gas to the U.S.

A Westcoast official estimated Wednesday that the rate increase would add about $4.5 million a year to Hydro's costs.

Hydro already is appealing to the Federal Court of Appeals an earlier board decision permitting a tolls increase and estimates that ruling will cost an additional $30 million.

The utility heads a long list of intervenors including B.C. Petroleum Corp., Pan Alberta Gas, Trans Canada Pipelines Ltd., the Council of Forest Industries, Cominco Ltd., Hiram Walker, Domglas Inc. and the B.C. attorney-general.

Westcoast said if the increase is granted there would be no cost impact on its domestic consumers. The rates at which Westcoast sells gas to these customers are established by the provincial government.

The costs would be borne by out-of-province gas producers and the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Hydro fears that any rate increase could be passed on to it and said it is "vitally concerned with ensuring a long-term supply of natural gas at prices which are just and reasonable."

Meanwhile, Hydro expects to spend $16.4 billion from now until 1990 to meet anticipated growth in electricity demand within the province.

And it expects to borrow $13 billion during the period to pay for the expansion.

Expenditures are designed to ensure that Hydro can meet an annual growth rate of 5.9 per cent expected for B.C., says Energy Blueprint 1980, a condensed version of the utility's annual system forecast.

Previously, the system forecast has been strictly an internal document, but Charles Nash, Hydro vice-president for corporate affairs, said Wednesday he expects the energy blueprint to become an annual public release.

Of planned expenditure of $16.4 billion — which counting interest actually would involve outlay of $18 billion — Hydro expects to spend $9 billion on generation of electricity, $3.3 billion on transmission lines, $1.3 billion on substations and $1.1 billion on distribution lines.

Stickers lead to death

SPENCES BRIDGE (CP) — An apparent midnight ramble and a handful of bumper stickers ended in death on the Trans-Canada Highway for three central interior B.C. youths Wednesday morning.

The three, whose identities have not yet been released, but all thought to be teenagers, drove into a service station in Cache Creek about 5 a.m.

One of them picked up a handful of fluorescent stickers that the service station sells for $1.29 each.

"One of the boys told them to put them back or he'd call the cops," the employee said. "But they just said, 'Go on and call.' So he did.

An RCMP cruiser from Cache Creek arrived a few minutes later, "and they just went screaming out of the parking lot" in a late model Mustang coupe.

The cruiser, joined by a second RCMP car from Spences Bridge, gave chase.

The driver of the Mustang lost control on a curve south of Spences Bridge and the car swerved into the path of an oncoming CP Transport truck.

The rear of the car exploded on impact and the rest of the body shell disintegrated.

Federal funding set for Duke Point project

NANAIMO (CP) — Federal Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin will set his signature today on a funding agreement with the Nanaimo Harbor Commission for a scaled-down version of the Duke Point industrial project.

The agreement will see only one deep-sea berth built at the industrial site south of this Vancouver Island city instead of two, harbor commission manager Lloyd Bingham said Wednesday.

It will also see the site reduced to 10 acres from 60.

The original agreement calling for two berths depended on forest giants MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and Doman Industries Ltd. agreeing to ship two-thirds of the annual tonnage from their Duke Point plants through the docks.

However, agreement could be reached only with Doman, Bingham said.

In other changes, the federal government is providing slightly less in capital grants — $6 million instead of $6.5 million — and will not provide a $5-million interest-free loan.

Bingham said the commission now will have to borrow between $3.5 million and $7 million on the open market.

The provincial government's contribution to the project, 60 acres of land valued at $7.5 million, remains unchanged, he said.

Attacker fined

OLIVER (CP) — A man charged with wilful damage and attacking a French-Canadian fruit-picker was fined $350 after pleading guilty to the charges in provincial court Wednesday.

Mike Fewchuk was charged after the June attack in the Okanagan community of Osoyoos. The incident was followed by a number of other complaints of harassment and discrimination from transient French-Canadians helping to harvest local orchards.

A representative of the Quebec government investigated, but said later the accounts were overblown.

Three other men involved in the attack are scheduled to appear in court Aug. 13. Another person will be charged when he returns from a vacation outside the province.

Work return plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 130 B.C. Telephone Co. workers in the lower Fraser Valley were asked by the company Wednesday to go back to work so normal service can be restored to Surrey, Delta and Langley.

Telephone service in the valley was disrupted by a walkout, now in its sixth day, over a seniority grievance.

The walkout began when two construction workers were sent home after refusing to carry out repair and installation jobs.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said the company will expedite the grievance if employees go back to work. But the Telecommunications Workers Union said its members will remain off the job until the two construction workers are reinstated.

A new start

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich has the opportunity this month to placate much of the apprehension the B.C. Human Rights Commission has created among many women and minority groups in the province.

Unfortunately the 12-person commission took on the aura of a bad joke last year after the publication of some of the remarks made during a regular commission meeting. Suggestions that the commission should establish a take-a-gay-to lunch day and that men should have the right to throw women out of locker rooms didn't enhance the commission's image, even if the remarks were off-the-cuff quips.

However the icing on the cake, so to speak, came earlier this year when MLA Karen Sanford told the legislature that a commission member said that further female representation was not required on the commission because the "male commissioners are married and could get the women's point of view from their wives." The commissioner later said his comment was a joke, but given his position and responsibility for human rights in B.C., few people were laughing.

The Social Credit government has not gone out of its way to exhibit any real interest in human rights, specifically women's rights. Since it took office in 1975 it abolished the Office of the Co-ordinator for the Status of Women and terminated the woman who was the consultant for sex discrimation in the education ministry. It also allowed the Human Rights Commission to sit idle and memberless for an eight-month period, and when it was re-activated provided for only two women members.

A few members of the present commission have compromised the integrity of the commission with their derogatory asides aimed at minority groups and women. The commission's ability to carry out its responsibility for human rights education and the promotion of human rights awareness should be above reproach.

The term of office for six commission members expires this month. Heinrich, the minister responsible for its operation, should carefully select replacements. Better women's representation would be a good start.

Stabilizing the economy

The idea of a provincial resources stabilization fund, proposed by Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, could be worth adopting.

In a province dominated by resource industries, the economy and hence provincial revenues are bound to be cyclical in nature. Lumber, pulp, mining and even natural gas are all resources that have shown wild swings in both sales and price in recent years.

The aim of the stabilization fund would be to ensure that provincial services are not affected by those swings in revenue. In times when the lumber market is at its peak, pouring revenues into provincial coffers, the government would take some of that revenue and invest it in a special fund. It would then be available for use when the industry had sunk into a slump and was contributing less than anticipated in taxes and stumpage fees.

The same would apply to other resource industries.

This is a good principle.

The government must ensure, however, that it does not succumb to any temptation to use the fund as just another account in which to squirrel away surpluses to be used for special projects or for election goodies.

This, it seems, may be what the government is planning. Curtis has suggested the fund would be spent in much the same way as current surpluses. Those surpluses have mainly been converted into funds to be used for special capital projects.

But the real need during economic downturns is for revenue to maintain the level of health, education and social services. Those are frequently the ministries that suffer when revenues are falling short of expectations.

Also, legislation should ensure that the fund will be spent when predicted revenues fall a certain percentage below budgetted figures. Otherwise, it will be all too easy for a government to decide that the bad times in which they should be spent fall only immediately prior to an election.

The government would be foolish to waste an essentially valuable idea by turning it into a political tool.

JAMES RESTON

Silver lining: an illusion?

WASHINGTON — Hamilton Jordan has moved out of his prestigious chief of staff rooms in the White House to help run President Carter's election headquarters in a couple of dreary floors of a modern building in downtown Washington.

At the moment, the place looks almost as disorganized as the Carter administration itself, but nothing seems to make Jimmy Carter's little band of adoring Georgians happier than misery. Having come out of adversity, they seem almost relieved to be back in an alley fight with the Northern Democrats and the fancy Republicans.

They see silver linings on every dark horizon. Is Jimmy Carter down to the lowest popularity rating of any president since the polls began? Well, says Jordan, when we started, we didn't even have 3 percent approval, let alone 21 percent now.

Is the economy a disaster?

Home stretch

It's turning the corner, Jordan says. Is Billy merely an embarrassment or a catastrophe? Either way, says Jordan, better now than in October!

Jordan and his old buddy Jody Powell and Bob Strauss are sure that Carter can win the nomination either in an open or a closed convention in New York, and they're probably right. They believe they've defeated Kennedy and that Anderson is running out of money and support, and will wind up with no more than 10 or 12 percent of the vote in November.

Jordan's view is that everybody always underestimates Jimmy Carter — that this is as true now as it was in the last election. He insists that the press has not been fair to Carter's record, but that this will be corrected in the campaign and in the debates to come.

Jordan's assumption is that the Republican platform is a blueprint for the past, and that Reagan has "no vision of the future." Carter is not going to allow this campaign to be "fought in the trenches," Jordan says, or on the economic statistics of the present. Carter will "sweep" the South, Jordan is sure, and make Reagan and the Republican platform the issues in the Northeast, in the industrial Middle West, and in California and the Northwest.

Jordan talks as if it will be possible to impose Carter's primary and caucuses votes on the Democratic convention and still unify the party for the campaign against Reagan in the fall. Also as if, in the end, Kennedy will be persuaded that he must support Carter or be blamed for losing the election and thus lose all chance of winning himself in the election of 1984.

In short, Jordan thinks that all these dubious points can be made to mesh together, like the teeth of a zipper, assuring a Carter victory after a hard fight.

The Democrats are running, not against Reagan but against the caricature of Reagan, not against the whole Republican Party, but against its conservative wing that dominated its platform in Detroit.

Nobody who listened to Reagan's acceptance speech at the Detroit convention, or watched him addressing the distinguished black audience of the Urban League in New York this week could fail to notice the difference between Reagan the cartoonist's caricature and Reagan the presidential candidate of the Republican Party.

In fact, Reagan is not only appealing to the blue-collar workers and the middle-class by his attacks on the Carter record on unemployment, inflation, prices, interest rates and housing, but is even challenging Carter on moral issues, which have been Carter's main hope for re-election.

There will undoubtedly be fundamental differences between the parties over the equal rights amendment and the abortion issues in the campaign, over welfare issues and jobs, and foreign policy and many other things, but Jordan is probably wrong in thinking that Carter will destroy Reagan in the debates dealing with the security of the family at home and the security of the nation in the world.

Reagan has not been on the stage all these years for nothing. Like most politicians who have been parading their beliefs or prejudices for a long time, including Jimmy Carter, Reagan has talked a lot of nonsense, but now he has a new role and new script-writers, with a wider grasp of world problems, and he reads his lines better than any other politician today.

Cynical age

Hamilton Jordan's view is that, in this cynical age, the voters are saying that it doesn't make much difference which of these two candidates wins, but that Carter will finally prevail by making clear that there are fundamental differences on policy in the nation and overseas.

Reagan is now obviously trying to blur these differences. And he is doing it very gently, and even with humor. Carter may, as Jordan hopes, catch him up on a lot of facts. But Reagan says, well, he doesn't try to cook every meal or wash every dish, like Carter; he will leave something to a good staff. Carter can undoubtedly get through the convention next week, open or closed, but the economy and the polls are against him, and Reagan is probably not going to be as much of a patsy as Jordan assumes.

MARY JANIGAN

Proud of his fledglings

OTTAWA — Ed and his NDP gang are back doing what they have always done best — clobbering Liberals.

They're the surprise stars of the new Parliament — a feisty and rowdy opposition that lost their power-broker muscle in the last election but have since rediscovered their zealous third-party clout.

They took a housekeeping parliamentary session and snuffled for issues like manic hound dogs. They churned out press releases. They stirred up controversy on everything from fighter planes purchases to the new Bank Act. They even prolonged a routine adjournment motion into a three-day fracas over a Liberal decision to bypass the Commons and permit construction of the southern portion of the Alaska natural gas pipeline.

Real opposition

So it's no surprise that the New Democratic Party caucus is being dubbed "the real opposition" as the August doldrums settle on the Hill. And it's no wonder that leader Ed Broadbent has been patting himself and his 31 MPs on the back and almost chortling with joy. After all, it's been more than a year since he had something to crow about.

"As self-congratulatory as it must sound, this is, over-all, the best NDP caucus that I've ever seen," he told FP News Service. "We've gone through two elections and we're into a majority government and one might have thought that we would have slumped into coasting.

"But we haven't. And I'm very proud."

Proud? Perhaps grateful would be a better word.

He emerged from the May, 1979 election with a 26-member caucus — up from 17 in the previous Parliament — including 14 largely inexperienced fledglings. That gave him the effective balance of power in the minority House. But it came to nothing when Tory leader Joe Clark decided to handle his minority government as if it were a majority.

By the fall, he was tangled in bone-wearying crusades to save Petro-Canada, to ease down interest rates and to preserve lower oil prices. And by December, he had backed himself so far into an ideological corner that a saucy NDP motion condemning Clark's first budget ended up bringing down the government.

It was a risk. In the past, the NDP has paid — and paid dearly — for scuttling governments. But Broadbent, undaunted, aimed for 40 to 45 seats in the 1980 election and another power-broker role in the next Parliament.

Instead, he got 32 seats for his pains, including 11 more starry-eyed newcomers. The Liberals sailed back into majority control. And the NDP was in danger of losing the spotlight — and leverage — that automatically accrues to any small party in a minority Parliament.

Broadbent says now that he misses the drama and potential power of a cliffhanging minority: "All politicians want to do more than just talk and to produce some results.

"If the Clark government had been more adept at handling the House, if they had responded more in our direction, it would undoubtedly have been more satisfying," he says, somewhat wistfully.

ED BROADBENT
. . . real opposition leader

"Now, in this (majority) situation, the very best that an opposition can hope to achieve is to focus public attention on what the government is doing — even if it can't change it."

If Broadbent misses the drama, however, his aides are clearly relieved. "We have a lot more freedom and ability to do things without constantly being under the gun," sighs one key staffer. "We can devise tactics without someone saying, 'Are you going to make the government fall today?'."

Moreover, as that strain abated and the grandstanding cooled, Broadbent's fledglings found their wings. British Columbia's Terry Sargeant asked some hard-nosed questions about the performance of the F-18A fighter jet and Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne was forced to re-examine Canada's $3 billion contract to purchase 137 planes. Ontario's Ian Deans began hammering away at aid requests from the troubled Chrysler Corporation and, under that scrutiny, the Liberals concocted a skillful package for $200 million in delayed loans.

Toronto star Bob Rae started protesting the proposed new Bank Act and he just would not quit. He produced a flurry of 80 amendments that included demands for government power to order banks to lower their interest rates. The bill bogged down in debate and the Liberals were forced to pass a five-month extension for the old act.

The finale came last month as the session dithered to a close. The Liberal cabinet approved an amendment to the 1977 bill which permitted construction of the Alaska pipeline to send American gas across Canada to southern markets. The amendment, of course, allowed construction of the southern portion to send Canadian gas to the south. The NDP erupted while the Tories seesawed. Another rookie, British Columbia's Ian Waddell, led the charge.

"That was the first new issue of substance to loom in Parliament since the May election," says Broadbent. "Sure, there are important questions on energy and inflation and unemployment but they had been thrashed out through two elections. So the pipeline gave us the chance to really dig in and show what an opposition is all about."

Good issue

A veteran Tory MP — who normally has no sympathy with the NDP — says candidly that many of his party wanted Clark to link pipeline approval with a demand for extension of the Quebec-Montreal gas pipeline to Halifax: "But we didn't do that and they (the NDP) tried to end up the session with a bang and they did it — and it wasn't a bad issue to do it on either."

"A lot of the issues have been up their alley this session — and we looked generally pretty flat."

Meanwhile, as Broadbent prepares for this month's two-week trip to Poland and Germany to discuss detente and defence, he permits one indulgent memory about last fall's session when the rookies were pumping out press releases on everything from chicken prices to coastal rescue services and no one was listening.

"I told them that they'd be laughed at and ignored 80 per cent of the time but I told them to keep on doing it," he says. "And it's suddenly, finally clicked."

Wolf control

I was pleased to read your objective and thought-provoking article on wolves by Derek Sidenius (July 16). It well illustrates a sensitive wildlife management area which is often misunderstood by the public.

During the past years any mention of wolf control, particularly by Compound 1080 baits, provoked an immediate and massive, and may I add, often justifiable reaction from concerned citizens. Most concerns were genuine, although frequently based on inadequate information.

The details of wolf management on Vancouver Island are open to public debate at organized meetings. At this point, may I ask the courtesy of your column to make a few clear statements on the issue?

It is a major management objective of my ministry to maintain viable populations of all native predators, including wolves, in wilderness areas of the province. Ministry policies determine the control, where required to resolve a local problem, must be directed at removing problem predators from a specific area, without a long-term impact on wilderness predator populations.

Such reactive management of problem predators, developed in the province during the past years, is among the most progressive on the continent, if not around the world. The program clearly recognizes the rights of predatory species to exist. Hunting and trapping are only allowed where a harvestable surplus or unusually high population numbers exist.

Wolves which attack domestic livestock are controlled on a reactive and site-specific basis without an impact on neighboring wilderness populations. Policies and permit conditions determine that poison baits can only be used where the shooting or trapping of problem animals cannot be applied effectively.

Uncommonly high wolf densities in parts of Vancouver Island present a potential threat to local deer and elk populations. Attacks on livestock are up and recent incidents of wolves harassing people are cause for concern.

Up to the present time, ministry staff have not submitted a proposal to control wolves outside of agricultural areas. However, the idea of selective and temporary control of wolves in problem areas by various methods, including the experimental use of 1080 baits in a controlled and site specific manner, is now a subject of discussion at public meetings.

Any uses of 1080 baits in the program will require a permit, issued by the Pesticide Control Branch, which will be subject to public appeal.

Local management programs, if necessary, will take environmental safety into consideration. The underlying principle will be that a temporary reduction of predators to restore a healthy balance of the prey/predator/habitat system is better than a long-term natural fluctuation which in its extreme may locally eliminate both prey and predator. With man's interference with nature through use of the land, further interference to maintain nature is unavoidable.

Indiscriminate programs directed to predator elimination are nightmares of the past in British Columbia. Site specific programs to resolve local problems are management tools which will help us to maintain our rich environment, including wolves and oher predators, for the enjoyment of future generations.—Stephen Rogers, Minister of Environment.

Praise for Sadat

Most editorial correspondence deals with local problems and seldom refers to events and personalities which make an unforgettable mark on the international scene.

May I be allowed to express my sincere admiration and deep respect for a foreign leader, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt. Regardless of possible adverse reaction from his Arab neighbors, Anwar Sadat offered asylum, medical assistance and comfort to the deposed ruler of Iran, and extended his hospitality to the family of the deceased monarch.

It is impossible for us to form an unbiased, impartial and complete judgment of the Shah of Iran's 37 years of reign. But let us be aware that, during the course of ancient, medieval, and contemporary history no despot, dictator or tyrant could rule for as long as 37 years even when protected and substained by a personal army and a devoted entourage of supporters.

Beside, it is unethical to speak evil of the dead. History only will be the judge in the years to come.

I do hope that all Egyptians — where they live at home or abroad are justly proud of their president. He has given the world a magnificent example of political courage, humane, kind, generous and lasting friendship.

Anwar Sadat will deserve the admiration and gratitude of the entire world. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road, Victoria.

Bennett plugs on alienation theme

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Vancouver Sun

Negative reaction to the provincially sponsored Ottawa-bashing campaign does not appear to have dimmed Social Credit enthusiasm. Bill Bennett has, true to his word, been spreading the reports of alleged B.C. alienation far and wide.

The latest edition of the prestigious Financial Post, for example, carries a front-page interview with the premier of B.C. in which he reiterates the outline of his government's separatist-style campaign to convince British Columbians that they are paying more for Confederation than they are receiving.

A few excerpts:

"Bennett has decided to risk fanning the fires of Western Canadian alienation from the rest of the country as he marshals public opinion in British Columbia against Ottawa's planned energy export tax.

"For ammunition Bennett will use the argument that British Columbians pay almost $1 billion a year in 'hidden taxes' — tariffs and quotas that protect the manufacturing industries of Central Canada. This is over and above equalization payments to poorer provinces . . .

"He acknowledges — though in not so many words — embryonic stirrings toward Western separatism."

The B.C. premier told the Financial Post that he had had the provincial finance department run through the ledgers to arrive at his "ballpark" estimate that belonging to Canada costs B.C. a billion a year.

The propriety aside of using provincial employees to marshal anti-Canadian arguments, the conclusions are sheer drivel. Rene Levesque, you will recall, tried exactly the same tactic and he lost.

He tried to convince Quebecers that it was costing them dollars to be Canadians and that an independent Quebec would be much better off over the long haul. The argument that Mr. Bennett is simply marshalling an economic case against a proposed border tax on B.C. natural gas has no basis in either logic or arithmetic.

British Columbia started the current fiscal year with a surplus of about $1 billion, accrued in large part because of the federal decision to increase the export price of B.C. gas last fiscal year.

The B.C. budget for the current fiscal year is $5 billion. According to recent reports from Ottawa the export tax now being considered by Ottawa would be about 25 per cent of the B.C. government's current revenue from gas sales.

In round terms, B.C. would pay about $100 million a year in tax. That is less than the additional amount the government will pay the province's nurses under their new contract.

I'm not trying to argue that $100 million is not a large sum, but any nitwit can see that the threat of a new federal tax of that magnitude is not justification for the anti-Canadian arguments now emanating from Victoria.

Good grief, Victoria has been trying to extract some $180 million from Ottawa in the form of a hidden subsidy for B.C. coal. Victoria is also poised on the verge of demanding money from Ottawa to help build a new football stadium.

If Mr. Bennett is going to proceed along this misdirected route he is going to have to balance the other side of the ledger by providing British Columbians with estimates of what B.C. receives from Canada in "hidden" federal subsidies.

How much, for example, is a Canadian armed force worth to British Columbia? What's the worth of the world-wide network of diplomatic and immigration personnel? What's it worth to the average Canadian tourist to be able to appeal for help to a Canadian embassy in Bangladesh? How many dollars does Mr. Bennett think his Canadian citizenship is worth?

It's actually amusing. Just think if the Maritime provinces tried to employ Mr. Bennett's bank-balance test of Canadianism. Are the residents of Fredericton less worthy than the residents of, say, Penticton because they are net recipients of cash from Confederation?

Mr. Bennett knows damned well that the money Ottawa is going to extract from B.C. in the form of extra energy taxes is going to go to benefit the have-not provinces. If anyone has a beef about the taxes they are paying it should be the British Columbia businessmen whose contributions to the general benefit of the provincial treasury were up a whopping 42 per cent in the first quarter of the current fiscal year.

Let's put this proposed federal export tax on B.C. gas into proper context. What Ottawa is asking for is an extra two per cent, not of B.C.'s wealth but of B.C. government revenue. Remember who cranked up this province's sales tax two per cent because he said he needed the money to balance the books? Remember who increased auto insurance rates when he needed the money?

The mean argument that the hated Easterners need Western revenue simply to compensate for their own fiscal mismanagement is also sheer sorcery. Mr. Bennett is a lucky man because he just happens, by an act of God, to be the premier of a recession-proof province, a province whose wealth derives from the export of natural resources.

If a third of British Columbia's labor force were employed in the automobile industry Mr. Bennett wouldn't be talking this same drivel, you can be assured.

I think Mr. Bennett and his pals have woefully misjudged the people of this province, but we'll see. Obviously the campaign is continuing apace.

SAKHAROV . . . 'don't forget'

Their rights, our interest

By FLORA LEWIS

MOSCOW — It is hard to imagine what it means to be a dissident in a totalitarian society. Georgi Vladimov, one of the few remaining in Moscow, did not deliberately set out to oppose the rulers and the system under which he must live.

"My position developed gradually, in stages," he said during a long, lively talk at his home here. But now his mind is very clear, and he seems to fear nothing. Step by step, he has been pushed beyond the limits where there is anything to be saved by discretion, and he is content to have his name used because "it means more when you put your name to your views."

In fact, he had only one request, that people in the West keep speaking up about Andrei Sakharov. "Don't forget him," Vladimov said, "his fate depends on it." There is a point where foreign voices, far from harming those who are persecuted for demanding human rights in the Soviet Union, become their sole protection.

Like Jacek Kuron in the Polish opposition, Vladimov doesn't think the outside world can bring reforms or greater freedom. "We have to do it ourselves, from inside," both said. But both also believe firmly that Western support is not only a moral gesture but in the clear national interest of free countries, because only through pressure for reform will the totalitarian rulers be forced to attend to their peoples' needs and stop menacing others.

In the long run, it is not fear of confrontation with the United States but the demands of their own citizens that can bring the basic changes that will make for peaceful coexistence. Meanwhile, as Vladimov points out, the rulers use the dangers of confrontation "as the pretext for repression. They say we are in peril, so don't grumble, support our country."

Vladimov is a sturdy man of 49, with big square hands and an unmistakably Russian face: broad, sharp planes and a turned-up nose. He sprinkles his lucid conversation with humor, and his pretty, flirty wife Natasha laughs constantly as she spreads a feast for visitors in a special effort at Russian hospitality. There is nothing austere or gloomy about them; they even chuckle about the plain clothesman who has to wait outside and report who comes and goes.

The son of two teachers of Russian, Vladimov said he always loved literature and wanted to be a writer. He was in the Komsomol, the Communist youth organization, but declined an invitation to join the party because he felt an aspiring writer shouldn't belong to any party. His father died in a German war prison. His mother was arrested in 1952 and later rehabilitated by Khrushchev.

He was educated in a military school, starting in 1943, and afterward studied law, but left to work on a fishing boat in the North Atlantic. It wasn't until he was 30 that he wrote his first novel and began to win acceptance as a professional writer. That brought him in contact with other writers who were developing critical thoughts — as well as with the bureaucrats in charge of suppressing such ideas.

In 1977, he made the irrevocable choice: he resigned from the Soviet writers' union with an eloquent, open letter of protest. That meant he could no longer be published in his own country and had no other option but to go on, trying to get his manuscripts printed abroad, becoming a part of the tiny society of dissidents because the rest is closed to him.

His latest book, Faithful Ruslan, is about a camp dog, so thoroughly trained to hound prisoners that he is disconsolate when the gulag is closed. But years later, when workers come to build on the abandoned site, Ruslan happily attacks them, thinking the good old hounding days are back. It is an allegory about the Stalinist terror, and a warning that its apparatus has not yet been dismantled but could be revived.

Being involved with human rights in Russia is a busy job. Vladimov has to get up at dawn to have time to write because so many people come to see him in his capacity as president of the Moscow chapter of Amnesty International — now down to six members. They tell their troubles and seek his help, unfortunately in vain.

"The movement is shattered," he said. "People have been deported and dispersed and only a handful are left. But it will arise again, in a new form, with new people. It is the only way for Russia to get out of this mess."

At a time when Americans are arguing whether human rights should have a place in U.S. foreign policy, Vladimov doesn't even hint at our responsibility toward those who have staked their lives in response to the American message that affirmed those rights.

He just says that there is no other way to change Russia, to make it safe for the world as well as for its own people. "I don't know if President Carter will enter American history," Vladimov says, "but he has already entered Russian history with this policy."

It was doubtless applied awkwardly at times, but on the fifth anniversary of the Helsinki agreement, United States efforts to support human rights cannot be abandoned for lack of the patience and the courage already shown by dissidents. Their argument is more compelling than a deliberate arms race.

For the dignity of Bolivia democracy

New York Times

Bolivia's armed forces don't brag about their record against foreign enemies. They have suffered historic defeats at the hands of Chile and Paraguay, shrinking the nation's borders and cutting off its outlet to the Pacific. But Bolivia's generals and lakebound admirals have found their true calling at home, in the repeated overthrow of Bolivian governments. In 150 years they have perpetrated many of the nearly 200 changes of government. In recent years they have seemed intent on quickening even that astonishing pace. Their coup last month was the fourth, and most brutal, in two years.

The military remains blatantly opposed to the democratic process. The coup-makers last month said they acted "for the dignity of Bolivia, to reject the results of the general elections and to declare the Congress and its actions unconstitutional." Those elections were leading to the imminent installation of former President Hernan Siles Suazo for a new term at the head of a leftist coalition. Whatever one thinks of his political bedfellows, Siles's repeated election successes gave him legitimacy. That cannot be said for the new junta. Many Bolivians, including those in the powerful tin miners' union, have refused to resign themselves to democracy's defeat and have taken up arms against the military.

The latest coup stands out because it is so much like the crude, indeed fascistic undertakings associated with the neighboring dictatorships of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. The shooting of one leftist leader has been confirmed and a campaign of intimidation seems to have begun against leftists, centrists and foreign exiles and journalists. For such reasons alone, the coup deserves the rebuke that Washington has given by suspending military assistance.

Americans have a wider stake in the fate of Bolivian democracy. Bolivia lies between the democratic Andean nations and the dictatorships of the Southern Cone. The United States, eager to promote the political values of the north, has directly involved itself in efforts to keep Bolivia's democratic hopes alive. Last fall, Washington's sanctions helped reverse a military coup after just two weeks. Those who find dignity in democracy will hope that more forceful pressure — again including the suspension of economic as well as military aid — can still save the situation.

The right image for women

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — The pretty image of Mum in a flowered apron, worrying only about feeding her smiling family the right breakfast food, is still dear to the hearts of male advertising executives.

Which is why a female director of an advertising company, Sam Rothenstein of D'Arcy MacManus and Masius, was finally driven to try testing a random bunch of women on whether they preferred that image, or something a bit more progressive and in line with the 44 per cent of British mothers who go out to work.

She got together two parallel commercials, one showing the traditional sweet mother in a feminine dressing-gown seeing two schoolboys and a husband out of the door. The other showed them all getting breakfast together, and Mum, wearing a fur coat, sweeping out of the door with them.

The films, it seems, released a torrent of feeling in the women who watched. They hadn't realized until then, they said, just how much they resented being always and only shown as the supporting cast in other people's lives, always and only the smiling housewife or sweet sex kitten, built only to please and feed the men. (The fact that the peculiarly awful gunk on offer looked just as disgusting in both the commercials was neither here nor there.)

These clips were shown as part of a film about the images of women currently in the making, and previewed last week in London at a meeting called to celebrate 10 years of Britain's Women in Media group.

This group is a small bunch of women who try, with heaven knows what lack of success, to stop Britain's news-sheets, advertisements and magazines from being quite so sexist in the way they put across women.

Speakers included actress Jane Lapotaire, currently playing the outrageous Piaf on stage; Anna Ford, our prettiest news announcer; and Bel Mooney, a journalist who resigned from a popular daily paper when they took out her report of the Women's Trade Union Conference and put in yet another feature on see-through nightdresses instead.

Women in Media, it seems, come in all shapes and sizes, from the immensely elegant Sam Rothenstein herself, through the women's mag ladies who could best be described as comfortable, to the one female photographer (the males all trooped out panting when Anna Ford left); this lass, her rolling curves encased in what seemed to be army fatigues, roamed ceaselessly round the room until I felt like immobilizing her, hippo-like, with a tranquillizing dart.

Anna Ford said the only way you could really fight the stereotype was through humor, and cited the effective U.S. poster of a litle bank clerk being told "Hire him, he's got great legs." Jane Lapotaire said she'd been shattered that, playing a lesbian, she encountered so much hostility even off the stage — people couldn't separate the actress from the role. And a bright girl from local radio was able to record the first-ever appointment on her network of someone who was there expressly to prevent sexual stereotyping in the programs.

What images of women do we want, though, if not the old stereotypes? Like Sam Goldwyn saying what we want is some new cliches, we're not likely to have no recognizable images of women.

Some of the media females at the meeting quarrelled with the clip showing a "progressive" woman because she swept out of the house in a fur coat. What sense did that make, they said, when 75 per cent of women's jobs are in service industries? They aren't striding about with briefcases, they're cleaning floors and making the office tea and doing the typing; they're working in laundries and shops. Show it like it is! was the cry.

I doubt if it would work. Selling advertising is selling dreams; dreams of marrying the Robert Redford look-alike; of being pretty and admired; even (goodness, how hopeless) of feeling an adequate mother.

You don't sell stuff for greasy hair or spots by showing a picture of the kind of girl who actually has greasy hair or spots, anymore than you boost cigar sales by showing the fat, bald, tiresome little men who will probably smoke them.

But you can change women's dreams, a bit, by what you show on the screen — shop girl into manageress, perhaps; canteen cook into Cordon Bleu chef; factory lass into manager: no harm in stirring up their ambitions. Show women's lives as they really are — why, you'd never sell them anything.

Before the judge

A 36-year-old North Vancouver man with a history of fraud-related offences was jailed for three months Wednesday after pleading guilty to defrauding the human resources ministry.

Joey Dolling, soon after being released from prison, applied for social assistance Feb. 15 in Burnaby and received about $240, court was told.

Four days later he made a similar application in Victoria where he received $196 because he was without adequate clothing or accommodation.

Robert St. George Ellis, a former city alderman, and George Sheldon Parkhurst, were committed to stand trial on a number of charges including conspiracy, theft, fraud, and breach of trust laid in connection with mortgage investments involving The Donut King franchise.

Ellis and Parkhurst are jointly charged on 11 counts. Ellis faces 68 counts separately.

Judge Lorne Pearce waived the preliminary hearing mid-way through the testimony on the request of defence counsel.

The men were remanded to Oct. 14.

Two city men who went on a spending spree with a stolen credit card were jailed 30 days.

Richard Pierre, 22, of 886 Dunsmuir, and Mark Stanley, 18, of 3287 Whittier, pleaded guilty before Judge Harold Alder to using a credit card that wasn't their own.

They used it to pay for a $61.55 meal at a downtown restaurant Monday and later that night for $53 in accommodation at a hotel. The card was used again Tuesday to purchase two dresses for a female companion.

A 43-year-old man who punched his common law-wife several times on July 8 received a suspended sentence after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Prosecutor Nick Lang said the wife of Alex Petrock, 56 Boyd, had contacted his office saying she wants a reconciliation.

Judge Alder ordered a presentence report for a 21-year-old mother of two who pleaded guilty to four counts of fraud.

Holly Janney, 1234 Fort, wrote four cheques between May 16 and 19 at downtown stores for the purchase of baby supplies for which there were insufficient funds in her account.

Janney said she needed baby food and supplies.

An 18-year-old who gave arresting officers six home addresses told the court he couldn't recall smashing the window of a parked car early Wednesday.

"I don't even remember doing it — I was pretty drunk," Anthony Hunt said after pleading guilty to committing wilful damage and possession of marijuana.

"I'm going to quit drinking for sure," he added.

The judge imposed a suspended sentence and placed Hunt on six months probation to include 100 hours of community service work.

Crash victims named

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Three persons killed in a plane crash Monday near here were identified Wednesday as pilot Howard Pruden, 57, his wife Phyllis, 53, both of Ukiah, Calif., and her sister Rita Hagood of Renton, Wash.

They were en route to Prince George from Renton when the plane crashed into Tabor Mountain while approaching here.

$3,230 fraud, $1,200 fine

A 22-year-old woman who admitted defrauding the ministry of human resources of $3,230 was fined $1,200 in county court Wednesday.

Ruth Dragomatz, now of Grand Prairie, Alta., has repaid the ministry in full, Judge E.J.C. Stewart noted during sentencing.

He said the fraud was deliberate and continuous but he would not impose a jail term mainly because she has two young children.

Dragomatz was receiving a life pension of $1,137 a month from workers' compensation for the industrial death of her common-law husband and now also has $845 a month from her job.

Her total income, he said, would make her the envy of her contemporaries.

The fine must be paid at the rate of $200 a month and in default, she will be jailed for six months.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Dragomatz came to Victoria from Prince George last October and applied for welfare and denied on her application she was receiving the compensation pension. The fraud lasted until March 1.

If she had declared the pension income, he said, she would not have been entitled to welfare.

Cheque flew away in storm

OXFORD CENTRE, Ont. (CP) — Evert Veldhuizen has an envelope that contains an amazing tale.

He received it last November from a man who found one of his cancelled cheques in the woods near Warsaw, N.Y., 80 kilometres east of Buffalo and about 250 kilometres as the crow flies from Woodstock.

In the letter, the man passed along greetings and said he hoped Veldhuizen had enjoyed his hunting trip in that part of the state.

The only trouble was, Veldhuizen had never been there.

The cheque had been in a box in the upstairs of his home when tornadoes touched down in Oxford Centre a year ago today. His home and farm were destroyed.

Veldhuizen says when the storm struck, he thought it was all over.

He was in the barn with his son when they thought they heard a thunderstorm approaching.

A few moments later, the buildings were demolished. Fortunately, he and his son were standing in a part of the barn that had cement walls.

But behind him, 8,000 bales of hay and straw swirled as the wood walls collapsed.

"We lost everything," Veldhuizen recalled. But with the help of friends and relatives, the family has been able to begin again.

Tories braced for constitution vote

CALGARY (CP) — The federal Progressive Conservatives are bracing themselves for a national constitutional referendum "which could be called by the Liberals during the next 12 months," says Calgary West MP Jim Hawkes.

"We have to get ready for a campaign because there is a chance that there will be a referendum," the Conservative MP said in an interview Wednesday.

Hawkes said the Conservatives expect Prime Minister Trudeau to introduce a constitutional bill in parliament during the fall, shortly after the next month's first ministers' meeting on the constitution.

"The bill will be introduced whether there is agreement or not about constitutional changes among first ministers.

"If there is agreement the bill won't have a referendum option. If there is no agreement, then the bill will have a referendum clause."

Hawkes said the Conservatives will try to amend such a clause because a referendum would bypass the provinces.

"If we fail, we will be ready to get involved in a referendum campaign," he said.

Trudeau has said he is not in favor of a national referendum on the constitution but, Hawkes said, the Conservatives feel the Liberal caucus in Quebec will push for the referendum "because Quebec wants a new constitution as soon as possible."

In Hamilton, meanwhile, Jacqueline Isbester was nominated Wednesday as the Progressive Conservative candidate in the Sept. 8 byelection for the federal riding of Hamilton West.

Mrs. Isbester, 45, a project officer with the employment development branch of the Canada employment and immigration commission, was acclaimed the party's candidate but only after a city alderman withdrew from the race Tuesday after accusing the PC riding association of playing favorites.

Paul Drage said he was told the association's search committee was looking for a high-profile woman candidate to try to hold the seat vacated when Lincoln Alexander, labor minister under the short-lived Joe Clark government, resigned in March to become head of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board.

The other major federal parties have already held nomination meetings with the New Democratic Party also fielding a woman candidate.

Miriam Simpson, a librarian, is the New Democratic Party candidate and Dr. Stan Hudecki is running for the Liberals.

Pepin confirms rail line rescue

WINNIPEG (CP) — Federal Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin has confirmed a decision of the former Conservative government to save 24 prairie rail branch lines earlier scheduled for abandonment.

The lines, with a total of 1,054 kilometres of track in three provinces, become part of the permanent prairie rail network and are protected until the year 2000, Pepin said at a news conference Wednesday.

Pepin said the main reason he pushed through the preservation order was to relieve the uncertainty of communities along or near the branch lines.

He said there was little public support for other means of improving transportation such as off-track grain elevators, an enlarged private trucking system or federal assistance to the provinces for road maintenance.

Pepin also commented on the stability of Via Rail, following reports the government has been advised to abandon half the routes of the publicly-owned national passenger service.

"Via Rail is not a money-making proposition, nor will it ever be," he said.

Mighty gloom lowers boom on park crowds

Bad weather hasn't cut Pacific Rim Park attendance this much but it has hurt

The gloomiest summer in four years has cut attendance at the popular Pacific Rim National Park by 11 per cent, a sharp contrast to last year's record-setter.

The park, which features Long Beach on Wickaninnish Bay, marked its 10th anniversary in April.

The decade saw the beach change from a hippie haven to a family holiday resort which attracted an international clientele.

To the end of July, only 391,884 visitors had been clocked in, mostly because of almost constant fog and rain last month, according to records kept by Howard Hambleton, a park administrator.

The overcast and fog that invariably turned to rain dumped 135.9 mm of moisture in July, double the normal precipitation.

So far this month, improved weather has drawn more visitors to the spectacular beach, although August is traditionally foggy.

To July 31 last year 438,417 people had visited the park, mostly from the B.C. mainland, Alberta, Vancouver Island and the U.S., in that order.

By the end of the year 739,467 persons had visited Long Beach, nearly 100,000 more than in 1978.

Hambleton said the character of visitors to the park had changed considerably since the park was declared — and since paved access was completed.

Visitors had been accustomed to uncontrolled camping and driving on the sands. Colonies of squatters living in plastic and driftwood shelters were common.

There was a sanitation problem because toilet facilities were non-existent.

Now there are about 1,000 organized campsites — federal and private — in the Long Beach area, plus motels and resorts close by but outside the park boundary. These account for about 260 rooms.

The campers come from Eastern Canada, all parts of the U.S., Germany, Holland, the U.K. and Switzerland, Hambleton said. Those from Ontario and Saskatchewan rank right behind the Americans, most of whom are from the western states.

"The Germans are sixth in order of numbers. Many of them fly and drive, often in large groups. They come in Winnebagos and speak little English.

"But they are very good visitors."

The official said the Germans are tidy and do not abuse the natural amenities.

Over-all, visitors to Pacific Rim Park are primarily families, travelling on average three to a vehicle.

An automatic traffic counter at the park entrance records each car, motor home and camper truck entering from Highway 4, including local residents and repeat traffic.

It clocked 41,120 vehicles in 1972, its first year of operation. Multiplying by three gave a total of 123,370 park visitors.

The following year the figure leaped to 607,998 persons, which Hambleton attributes to the fact the access was paved throughout for the first time.

In 1974 visitors climbed to 634,743, but dropped the next year to 594,987 and sagged again to 528,945 in 1976, the wettest year in memory, including one August day in which five inches of rain fell.

But in 1977 a total of 592,656 was recorded and the upswing was confirmed in 1978 with 647,811.

Last year was a super summer for weather, Hambleton said.

With the days of squatters past and plenty of campsites to accommodate all visitors, he said weather is the administration's biggest problem these days.

However some visitors who have not planned their trip fully may find trouble getting accommodation in the resorts, motels and private camping places. It helps to book ahead and to arrive early in the day.

Future plans for the Long Beach area include completion of the former Wickaninnish Inn as a nature interpretation centre by 1984. This large cedar building jutting on to the beach will have displays and a theatre in addition to the restaurant which is operating now.

The West Coast Trail, also part of the national park, has been furnished with all the ladders, boardwalks, bridges and cable cars intended to be installed along its 40-mile length between Pachena Bay and Port Renfrew.

Hambleton said no new work will be done, aside from regular maintenance, which is sometimes made difficult by the effects of weather. For instance, storms have caused many blowdowns in the Walbran and Camper Bay areas, and heavy rain has made the south end of the trail particularly muddy.

Robin Morton of Maple Bay will record the frenzied whale feeding — in color

Men, cameras going deep to follow foraging whales

Men and cameras will go beneath the Pacific Ocean later this month in a daring effort to film the ocean's most ferocious animal — the killer whale.

Robin Morton, a 26-year-old film-maker from Maple Bay, near Duncan, intends to film the Orcas as they herd salmon and feed on them.

His 10-man crew will place cameras on a platform on a lonely bay bottom near the northern end of Vancouver Island.

TV and movie cameras and men swimming with hand-held cameras are expected to provide enough footage for a one-hour documentary.

"What we expect to capture on color movie film is the drama of the frenzied feeding of killer whales as they chase the salmon right along the beach," Morton said in an interview.

Much of the filming will be done by remote control and will be monitored on an onshore screen.

Footage from the hand-held cameras will supplement what they get from the camera platform.

"We know of no one else who has ever attempted film documentation of the behavior of the killer whale in the wild," Morton said.

The filming is expected to start within two weeks and will continue into the autumn.

Killer whales, huge black and white mammals, have been studied in captivity. Vancouver's aquarium has two Orcas that give daily performances for visitors to Stanley Park.

Few people, however, have seen how they behave in the wild.

"The killer whales are the most ferocious animals of the ocean," said Morton.

"I have even seen one chase a fat sea bird right along the beach."

He has studied the whales for 10 years. Last summer he gained additional experience by filming them underwater with a hand-held camera.

Morton said marine scientists will be invited to the filming site to make their own observations.

Inner tube race cancelled

For the first time in five years there will be no Inner Tube Race on the Gorge this summer.

Bob Painton, president of the Hampton Park Hustlers who organize the event, said Wednesday the race had to be cancelled because of the withdrawal of Victoria Times' support.

He said he received a letter from managing editor Gordon Bell saying the newspaper could not support the race because of "severe limitations in our promotion budget and other considerations."

Painton said the newspaper had not given any money toward the event but the paper's promotion the last two years attracted 80 per cent of the entries.

Bell said today that while direct Times' cash contribution to the event had not been large, it had tied up paid staff time to an extent which the paper could not afford at this time.

"There were other considerations, as well," Bell said. "We took on support of the Inner Tube Race on an emergency basis with the demise of The Victorian, but it was obvious to us that if we were going to involve the Times with the race on a continuing basis we would have to spend a lot of money for better organization and supervision and we were not able to do that and maintain other sponsorship commitments of long standing such as the Y-Times track meet."

Bell added: "In my letter of withdrawal the suggestion was made that there were a number of organizations directly involved with the tourist business who could be approached for support and that if the race were to continue, the Times would give it normal publicity support."

Painton said that in the past five years 300 people have been involved in the race and betweeen 20,000 and 25,000 spectators.

He said all the entry fees had been used to assist local amateur sports and charities.

Board set to grab tree farm acreage

Expropriation proceedings against Victoria Plywood Ltd. were authorized — if necessary — by the Greater Victoria Water District board at its quarterly meeting Wednesday.

Water commissioner Ron Upward told municipal representatives on the board that 41 acres covered by a tree farm licence held by the company in the Deception Gulch area of the Leech River watershed will probably be needed for a dam project.

The amount of fill material available on water district land for the earth dam now under construction was severely underestimated by a consultant, Upward said.

As a result, the district has had to find alternative sources. He asked for authority from the board — composed of representatives from the councils of the four core municipalities — to initiate expropriation if it is required.

Upward also said the dam is about six weeks behind schedule. Because of the wet summer, Farmer Construction Ltd. has been able to work a total of only 26 days in June and July on the $153,000 project.

"It's a rush now in case the fall rains come early," he said.

In related business, Upward also told of the water district's struggle to extinguish mineral claims along the route of the Deception tunnel about 10 miles north of Sooke village, which will divert water from the Leech into the Sooke watershed when it is built in 1985.

The district published plans and a map of the route as required about two years ago. Shortly after, a miner went out and staked claims along the path — all strictly legal — and now the water district must buy him out before it can go ahead with the tunnel project.

The district is starting expropriation but is having trouble finding the man, who travels around the province a lot, Upward said. When papers are served on him, it will go to an arbitration panel which will set a figure on the value of the claims.

Pepin pledges cutter

A large new offshore Canadian Coast Guard cutter will be stationed on this coast, Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin promised today.

He made the announcement during the official opening of the CCG's $10 million marine base on Dallas Road. He didn't say when the vessel could be expected.

Pepin said it has not been decided whether to build a new ship or buy one. He said $3 million will be set aside for the acquisition.

The minister said two 21-metre search and rescue cutters are being built at Breton Industries in Port Hawkesbury, N.S. and will be ready late this year or early next. The first will go to Prince Rupert.

Two other sister ships will be built, Pepin added. Delivery will be in 1981 and one of the cutters will be based at Campbell River.

In addition, two 14-metre search and rescue high-speed launches will be completed next year, one to be based in Vancouver.

Psychic's vision of Seto slaying blurred: police

The search for the killer of Suzanna Seto has reached another dead end.

Police remain as baffled by the case as they were the day the 29-year-old Vancouver career woman's nude and beaten body was found in bushes near her motel room in Duncan on June 3.

Officers thought they had a lead when a psychic called earlier this week to say he had a vision of the slaying and provided a description.

The psychic, who was not identified, felt the killer was a Vancouver man known to his victim and had followed her from Vancouver to Duncan where she had gone to appraise a piece of property for a client.

The psychic told police the man had sexual fantasies about the woman and that her clothing was found strewn about her room because the killer was looking for a keepsake to remember her by.

The killer now feels remorse and is considering either suicide or another crime in the hope that he will be caught and punished, the psychic said.

But officers, who talked to the suspect in Vancouver Wednesday night, have ruled him out as a suspect.

The eight-man RCMP team assigned to the case has interviewed more than 250 people ranging from guests and employees of the Village Green Inn where Seto was staying to friends and acquaintances of the woman.

A spokesman said the team has received numerous unsolicited calls from the public including nearly a dozen from persons professing to have psychic powers.

The investigation was thwarted from the start when motel chambermaids unwittingly cleaned up pools of blood in Seto's room before police arrived, depriving officers of valuable evidence.

Did Waddling Dog sniff out juicy gov't bone?

NDP MLA Dennis Cocke wants to know whether an obvious pro-Socred bias helped Eric Lewis of Saanichton get a $1.4 million loan to expand his Waddling Dog Inn on the Pat Bay Highway.

Cocke told the legislature Wednesday the B.C. Development Corporation loaned Lewis Enterprises Ltd. $1.3 million last year and added a further $120,000 this year.

Cocke said the Waddling Dog Inn was famous for displaying anti-NDP signs during the years the NDP was in government. He asked whether this pro-Socred position influenced the granting of the loan.

Industry Minister Don Phillips denied any political influence-peddling and said the loan was granted on sound business principles.

Smaller marina plan revived

Saanichton Marina Ltd. has re-applied for a foreshore lease to build a marina in Central Saanich.

The new proposal calls for a reduction in berths from 1,200 to about 400.

The original application for the Saanichton Bay area was turned down by then resources minister Bob Williams in 1974.

Williams said the Tsawout Indian band's tranquil lifestyle would be disturbed by a marina development.

George Wheaton, who with Bob Wright, is a principal in Saanichton Marina Ltd., said Wednesday the amended application was resubmitted in May.

"The application was originally turned down because the minister said the size of the development would interfere with the band's way of life. I trust this reduction will remove their original complaints," Wheaton said.

Vic Underwood, the Tsawout's part-time band manager, said the band council meets tonight to discuss the new application.

Underwood said he expects the band council to take the same position it did when the development was first proposed.

That proposal, had it gone through, would have produced the largest marina in the province.

The area is zoned for marina use in Central Saanich's community plan, said Mayor Dave Hill, but the municipality has referred the matter to Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot.

Wheaton said the company owns only a narrow strip of land above the foreshore and intends to dredge the foreshore area to accommodate marina facilities.

Hill said the municipality doesn't oppose the development but will require all necessary environmental impact studies to be carried out before a marina could be developed.

Mt. St. Helens belches

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A steam plume rose to about 3,500 metres over Mount St. Helens on Wednesday, carrying bits of ash skyward from the crater, but little other activity was reported from the volcano.

"It's just steam, no eruption," said Bob Gabriel, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"There's ash in the plume from stuff already in the crater. Wind blows it (ash) around. Sometimes the steam plumes will pick up bits and pieces of it that's being blown around by the wind and carry it up with it."

Lisa McBroom, 27, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, suffered second degree burns on the lower part of her legs when she sank into a layer of pyroclastic material — hot ash and volcanic debris — while working on the flank of the mountain Monday afernoon. She was back at work on Wednesday.

Acupuncture shift

The acupuncture clinic at Victoria General Hospital will be moved from the ambulatory care unit to the hospital annex, Health Minister Rafe Mair announced Wednesday.

The move will increase the treatment capacity of the acupuncture clinic and the ambulatory care unit, Mair said.

"The increased facilities of the ambulatory care unit will allow more people to receive diagnostic and treatment services on a day-care basis, and this, in turn, is expected to release a significant number of inpatient beds for surgery such as eye operations," he said.

The cost of relocating will be $4,700 and will be shared on a 60-40 ratio by the government and the Capital Regional Hospital District.

Dutch say thanks with flower bulbs

The brilliance of 1,000 orange-red tulips will fill Victoria's Centennial Square next spring, a floral reminder of Canada's role in the liberation of Winschoten in the Netherlands in the Second World War.

The Dutch community is sending the bulbs this fall.

"As a memory of our town to the city of Victoria, we shall send you a thousand orange-red tulip bulbs, destined for the municipal building . . . in remembrance of the liberation," wrote Winschoten burgomeester E.J. Romijn to Mayor Bill Tindall.

The gift is the result of a visit to Winschoten's annual liberation celebration in May by Major Floyd Brooks of Victoria, a member of the 17th Canadian Field Regiment.

All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.

MacDonald condemns Bolivia military takeover

OTTAWA (CP) — Flora MacDonald, former Progressive Conservative external affairs minister, Wednesday joined church and labor groups to urge the federal government not to recognize the military junta which seized power recently in Bolivia.

A letter to External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan signed by Miss MacDonald and Pauline Jewett, New Democratic Party external affairs critic, also urges Canada to follow the United States' lead and suspend aid to the South American country because of the July 17 military coup.

The Canadian Labor Congress, the Interchurch Committee on Human Rights in Latin America, Le Comite Chretien pour les Droits de l'Homme en Amerique Latine and the United Church of Canada also signed the letter.

The coup, led by Gen. Luis Garcia Meza, prevented a coalition government elected in June from taking office. The World Council of Churches estimates at least 2,500 persons were killed when the military seized power.

It was the third coup in two years staged after elections to prevent former president Hernan Siles Suazo from regaining office. Siles has vowed to organize resistance to the new regime.

"Observers on the scene compare this latest coup to the 1973 coup in Chile for its pre-meditated style ... (and) its brutality," says the letter.

Terry's total tops $1.2M

ESPANOLA, Ont. (CP) — Terry Fox, over the half-way mark in his cross-Canada run, had another and financially-successful meeting with admirers when he stopped off here Wednesday

He was given a $500 cheque from the community of Espanola and $200 from nearby Webwood.

The money pushes the cancer fund total raised by Fox to more than $1.2 million.

NORAD shuffle set for '84

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — While much of southern Ontario, including Ottawa, is protected by United States Air Force fighters, the North American Air Defence Command intends to alter its defence network so that by 1984 Canadian bases will watch over Canadian skies, says a NORAD spokesman.

Maj. Merv Shoults of the 22nd region headquarters in North Bay, Ont., said that two regions — Canada East and Canada West — plus four American regions will replace the current eight-region defence network in which U.S. command posts watch over parts of Canada while Canadian bases scan American skies in some locations.

He said Canada's 24 long-range radar sites will relay information to a command centre at North Bay. Eastern Canada should have its own sky watch system, complete with F-18 fighters by 1982.

Shoults said that in the current defence network, a sliver of Canada from Georgian Bay to Nova Scotia lies within the 21st region of the command based in Syracuse, N.Y.

Sgt. Gary Grove, of 21st headquarters at Hancock Field, said region radar bases scan halfway across the Atlantic Ocean searching for intruders.

"Every plane that is flying has filed a flight plan and this information is fed into our computers," he said. "If the weapons controller finds an aircraft that is an unknown, we have a self-imposed two-minute limit to search the computer to find out if we know what it is. If nothing comes out, we scramble fighter interceptors to take a visual look.

"This could happen three or four times a month or not at all. In all cases I'm aware of, it's been a civilian airliner that's off course — not actually within the area it is supposed to be."

Grove said an inland sighting is unusual, but if an unknown aircraft were to be spotted over Toronto, Peterborough or Barrie, American fighters from Griffis Air Force Base at Rome, N.Y., would probably respond.

Inflation shield urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should be providing more inflation protection on income tax returns rather than thinking about ending indexing for personal exemptions, the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada said Wednesday.

In a news release, the institute said doing away with annual indexing of the basic personal income tax deduction, now increased each year to keep pace with inflation, would be particularly hard on low-income earners by bumping them into higher tax brackets.

The government is considering ending the indexing as a way of increasing tax revenues. Opposition spokesmen charge this would mean the government would be trying to make money on inflation.

The institute also said indexing should be extended to other deductions, such as the $100 medical allowance and the tax-free $1,000 income permitted on Canadian investments.

Alta. cattle mutilations laid to cult

CALGARY, Alta (UPC) — The RCMP is continuing to treat a series of cattle mutilations as the work of a cult, a police spokesman said Wednesday, despite a U.S. investigator's claim natural predators are to blame.

"In Canada, we're concentrating on the cult theory," said Corp. Lyn Lauber, heading the RCMP investigation into the four confirmed cases of mutilated cattle this year and 13 last summer.

Penthouse magazine in its September issue quoted former F.B.I. investigator Kenneth Rommel Jr., hired by the Santa Fe district attorney to look into mutilations in New Mexico, as saying coyotes, birds, flies and other predetors were responsible for an estimated 10,000 animal deaths and mutilations.

The 17 cases in RCMP files, including the latest confirmed June 6, are "straight-forward mutilations," Lauber said.

Feds reject VDT radiation check at CP

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal health department will not test video display terminals at The Canadian Press or any other organization because there is no hazard, says Walter Zuk of the radiation protection bureau.

Zuk says the department will not divert its eight-person inspection staff from work on genuine radiation hazards to run around the country looking at machines which they know emit no dangerous radiation.

"Unless there is some reason, even some slight shred of evidence (of danger), we see no point in checking things that we have already tested in our labs," he said in an interview.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

There is a term in bridge called "rectifying the count." The expression means very little to most players, because squeezes — the subject it applies to — are generally regarded as too advanced to understand. However, this misconception is based more on fantasy than fact. For example, take this deal where South gets to six notrump and West leads the king of hearts.

When dummy appears, declarer counts his sure winners and finds he has only eleven of them. If South is unfamiliar with squeezes or endplays, he wins the king of hearts with the ace and cashes all his high-card tricks, hoping to find a favorable division in either diamonds or spades and so acquire a twelfth trick. When neither hope materializes, he winds up going down one.

But if South is familiar with squeezes, he ducks the king of hearts. The great advantage of this play is that it "rectifies the count," meaning that declarer now has all the remaining tricks except one, instead of all the remaining tricks except two.

Let's say West next plays the queen of hearts. South wins and cashes four club tricks, hoping to squeeze one opponent or the other out of an otherwise sure trick. In the actual case, this method of play succeeds. East can safely discard a heart on the third round of clubs, but he must then discard a spade or a diamond on the fourth round and thus give declarer his twelfth trick.

It is not easy to recognize instantly the importance of ducking the king of hearts at trick one. The duck seems purposeless — but nothing could be further from the truth. It creates the "all but one" situation that is so often required for a successful squeeze, and to that extent the value of the play cannot possibly be overemphasized.

Technician checks out 'gas-saver'

Fuel saving device ads 'misleading'

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer and corporate affairs department has laid misleading advertising charges against the Canadian distributors of devices they claim give motorists more miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Doug Fraser, spokesman for the department's misleading advertising branch, said in an interview Wednesday that World Wide Energy Marketing Ltd. of Moncton, N.B., was charged July 30 with advertising that its Gas Mizer device could cut gasoline consumption by up to 25 per cent when it had not conducted tests to prove the claim.

It is an offence under the Combines Investigation Act to make such unproven claims.

He said Rosario Toscano, Jr. of Daytona, Fla., and Joseph Cormier and Roger Dupuis, both of Dieppe, N.B., have also been charged.

The company, a subsidiary of World Wide Marketing Ltd. in Orlando, Fla., will be fined if convicted of the charge during a provincial court hearing in Moncton. A date for the hearing will be set Aug. 18, Fraser said.

Another department official said tests conducted at the National Research Council showed the $60 device — a plastic water bottle and tube which injects water vapor into an automobile carburetor — failed to significantly improve fuel economy.

"Of all the so-called gasoline savers we have yet to find one that has the magic formula," he said.

Recent gasoline price increases have helped create a market for the devices and the government is not alone in its conern that consumers are being ripped off.

The Automobile Protection Association warned Tuesday that consumers should beware of all products offering better gas kilometrage.

I sold an outboard motor and a truck. The motor belonged to a friend of mine and I offered to place a classified ad for him since he was too busy. The response was terrific and the first person who came to see the motor bought it . . . and my truck! New York

Stock prices gained more ground in heavy trading Thursday, extending Wednesday's late upsurge.

With Wednesday's rally, the market broke out of a neutral trend that had set in almost a week before.

Analysts noted that many traders had been looking for a downward correction in stock prices after their sharp rally since early spring.

But no such such decline materialized, and traders evidently concluded that the rally still had further to go.

General Motors picked up 1⅛ to $53. A Wall Street Journal article on the company said it could emerge from the current recession "even bigger and stronger than ever."

Sav-On Drugs jumped 5¼ to 17⅝. Jewel Cos. set a plan to acquire the company.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Alcan Aluminium rose 1 to $33¼, Ashland Oil ½ to $36½ and McIntyre Mines ½ to $73⅞.

Campbell Red Lake fell ½ to $56½ and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting ⅛ to $24⅝.

company reports

Budd Canada

Budd Canada Ltd., maker of auto frames, had a net loss of $123,000 in the third quarter, compared with a net profit of $1.54 million in the similar period a year ago.

Net profits for the first nine months of its current fiscal year fell to $2.24 million from $8.46 million.

Nine-month sales declined to $80.3 million from $165.4 million, the company said.

It blamed the drop on the decline of the North American auto industry.

Torstar

Torstar Corp., publisher of The Star, had net income of $10.2 million in the six months ended June 30, compared with $8.7 million in the similar period a year ago.

The earnings are equivalent to $1.25 a share compared with $1.06.

Revenue in the first half of this year totalled $213.5 million compared with $177.5 million in the same period of 1979.

Boeing

Second quarter net earnings of $155.2 million, or $1.61 per share, were announced by The Boeing Co. on sales of $2.4 billion for the period.

This compared with second quarter sales in 1979 of $1.9 billion and net earnings of $120.1 million, or $1.25 per share restated for the 1980 three-for-two stock split.

Sales for the first half of 1980 were $4.6 billion, with net earnings of $295 million, or $3.06 per share, compared with sales of $3.7 billion and net earnings of $228.2 million, or $2.35 per share, for the first half of 1979.

GM dividend

Directors of General Motors Corp. have declared a 60-cent dividend on shares of common stock for the third quarter, the same amount declared in the previous quarter.

GM had paid $1.15 a share, plus extras in the second and fourth quarters, since the second quarter of 1979. Three months ago GM trimmed that to 60 cents without a second-quarter extra.

GM lost $412 million in the second quarter ended June 30 and analysts expect no fourth-quarter extra this year.

This year's third-quarter dividend will be paid Sept. 10 to stockholders whose names appear on the books Aug. 14.

Advantages out on platter but Burrards snub offering

By BILL WALKER

Vancouver Burrards lost the first game of their Western Lacrosse Association semi-final series to Victoria Shamrocks 14-7 at Memorial Arena Wednesday, but they didn't have a complaint in the world after it was over.

A legitimate one, at least.

They caught the Shamrocks shorthanded — three of the better Irish players were out with injuries and others were playing hurt.

They got to play their own type of hard-checking, intimidating game, due to the looseness of the officiating.

Burrards had a 5-1 lead at the end of the first period thanks to some spectacular goalkeeping by Brian Celli.

And they blew it . . . or else the Shamrocks took it back.

At any rate, the Rocks had drawn even at 6-6 after two and then scored the final eight goals of the game after Burrards had taken a 7-6 lead at 5:03 of the third.

Coach Bill Bradley of Burrards was still stunned after the game.

"I don't know what went wrong," he said. "We had finished the season well. We had two good workouts before the game. We'll never get them short that many players at home again. And then we did everything wrong. We let them inside. Our passing was terrible. Sure, we know we have to beat Smeltzer (Larry, the Shamrocks' goalkeeper) . . . But we didn't execute well. I just can't understand it."

Smeltzer, meanwhile, was the most solid of all the Rocks — which isn't really that amazing if one looks at his record — and he rose to his best after that almost fatal opening 20 minutes as he held the visitors to one goal in each of the final two periods.

The missing Rocks were Gerry Cadwallader, Larry Bell and Jim Lynch. Cadwallader and Bell were injured Monday while returning from a Shamrock picnic and Lynch in Saturday's final season game at Nanaimo. Cadwallader is suffering from multiple bruises occasioned in a fall from a truck. Bell has a possible fractured arm from the same accident and his arm in a cast but says he may be back by the end of the week. Lynch has a bruised shoulder and his arm in a sling but says he will be ready to play in the series third game here Saturday. Art Webster played with a painfully bruised achilles tendon.

But, as is often the case, the subs came through for the Irish.

Scott Browning, a recruit from the Senior B League, paced the scorers with three goals and one assist. Dan Green, coming off an injury and playing his first game in some time, scored two goals and had two assists and Mike Game, a junior recruit, scored one goal.

As a matter of fact, it was the "other guys" who put this one away for the Rocks as Green, Game and Jeevan Dillon scored three goals just 58 seconds apart in the third period to overcome that 7-6 Vancouver lead and give the Irish the lead for the first time.

Kevin Alexander ran his consecutive game scoring streak to 42, a new WLA record, by scoring in the third period. He had two assists. Other goals were scored by Chris Hall, Webster, Dave Thomson, Rick Baker and Tej Labh. Norm Baker and Jim Boyd each had five assists.

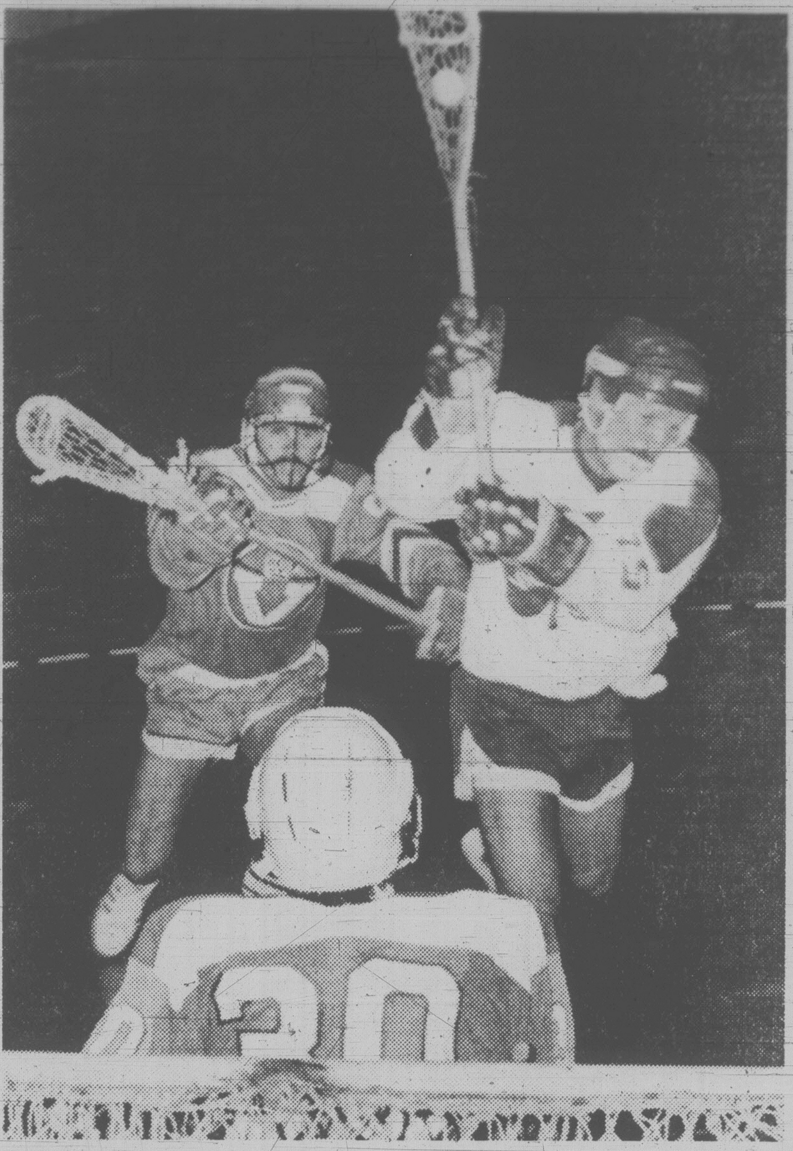
Eric Otterstrom scored two goals for Burrards while singles went to Dan Perrault, Stu Aird, Paul Ciocci, Bruce Turris and Doug Hayes.

Burrards took 44 minutes in penalties to Shamrocks' 30 and the game ended as it often does when Burrards are in town with the penalty box occupied and Ward Sanderson one of the incumbents.

This time, however, Sanderson wasn't the real bad boy. Mike Smith and Baker topped the penalty totals with 24 and 22 minutes, respectively, because of a fight in the third period, and Ron Pinder of Burrards got a double minor near the final whistle for losing his cool after an apparent uncomplimentary remark from Green.

And no complaints there either.

The second game goes tonight in Kerrisdale.



SHAMROCKS' Art Webster breaks away from his check to get a scoring try on goalkeeper Brian Celli of Vancouver Burrards in opening period of Western Lacrosse Association semi-final playoff series at Memorial Arena Wednesday night, but Celli was equal to task and stopped the Victoria forward. Steve jolting giants in men's title chase

Chad Gaffield might be the hot favorite right now and the player many say is the man to beat in the men's singles event, but it's young Steve Majocha who is doing all the giant-killing in the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament.

Steve, who has turned 18 since the last Oct.1 deadline for the under-18 junior events, reached the semi-finals of the boys' singles with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Dennis Lee. He's one of the last four left in the event — and that's pretty good out of a starting field of 39.

But Steve didn't stop there. He went onto the court and shocked second-seeded Larry Mais, runner-up in last year's Times tourney, 7-6, 6-4 to make it through to the last eight in the men's singles event which began back in June with a whopping entry of 131 players!

His game with Mais, who was beaten in last year's final by double winner Kerry Chan, was a terrific battle with neither player ever being more than a game ahead until the service break at 4-4 in the second set.

It's the first time through to a semi-final for Steve who has been competing in the Times tourney now for four years.

"The quarter-finals have always been my stumbling block," he says with a grin. "Each year I've gone out in the quarters and each time I've been beaten by the eventual boys' champion — Rex Craig, Perry Evans and then Kerry Chan."

Steve is on the tough side of the draw this summer, too, and if he's going to reach the final he has to beat top-seeded Rick Folk in the semi-finals when the tourney winds up at Oak Bay's Henderson Park on Aug.23 and 24.

Folk, who turned 18 on Tuesday, reached the semis with a 9-1 win over Rod Chow. A graduate of Spectrum High School who plans to go to the University of Victoria to work toward a physical education degree, Rick was runner-up to Chan in the boys' singles last year.

Also through to the semi-finals in the boys' event are 17-year-old Bob Brown and 15-year-old David Blair.

A graduate of Reynolds High School where he was on the tennis team, Bob has been playing tennis for several years but is making his first appearance this summer in the Times tourney.

David, a student at St. Michael's University School where he'll be going into Grade 10, has been playing since he was 11 years old and is also appearing in the Times tourney for the first time.

Bob had a fairly comfortable journey through to the last four, getting past Alex Campbell 6-2, 6-2, while David ousted Ken Chong 6-3, 6-1.

It's Steve versus Rick in the top half of the draw and Bob against David in the other semi-final and the winners clash on the Sunday, Aug.24, in one of the five finals as the summer-long tourney designed exclusively for public parks players ends.

Mais was the fifth out of eight seeded players in the men's singles to be eliminated, joining Folk, Evans, Joe Thompson and Glenn Johnston on the sidelines. And of the remaining three, two had to battle hard through three setters to make it into the quarter-finals.

Only fourth-seeded Lorne Chan, a beaten semi-finalist last year, had a relativey easy time, getting past young Gary Naysmith 9-2. Seventh-ranked John Zanic had to fight hard to beat lanky, big-serving Jim Fields in three sets and eighth-seeded Jay Wilson also needed three sets to get past veteran Charles Coley.

Phil Thornton, the man who toppled Folk in the men's event, went out himself in the round of 16 to Stuart Inglis, who won 9-7.

Meanwhile, Gaffield continues to look the class of the field, breezing past Bob Bishop 6-2, 6-0 to make it into the last eight.

On the tourney's finals day, engraved trophies will go to all event winners and runners-up with a special bonus prize of a new Black Knight racquet, courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora Avenue, going to each champion, plus a consolation prize to each losing finalist.

Bullpen woes hurting Blues

Opportunity is being offered this week, but if Victoria Blues are to make a move towards first place, the Northwest Baseball League team will need greater efficiency from the bullpen.

Relief pitching has not been overpowering. The firemen have had, at best, up-and-down success.

A case in point was made in Walla Walla Padres' 7-2 victory over the Blues at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday.

Walla Walla's John White and Mike Otto of the Blues had a good game going, 2-2, for seven innings.

In the eighth, however, Otto walked the first two batters to face him. Blues' manager Jim Gattis brought in Mark Liber but the Victoria reliever also walked a pair of batters and forced in the tie-breaking run.

Exit Liber, enter Rob Butler. Walla Walla's Bob Geren promptly lined a double for two runs that made the score 5-2, and the Padres were on their way to a victory that provided a 2-1 series edge.

Walks were disastrous. Victoria pitchers served up 10 free passes, including six by Otto.

Moon stirs up Esks; Als chill Rider fans

The Canadian Press

Warren Moon likes to stir things up when he gets into a game.

The young Edmonton Eskimos quarterback emerged from the sidelines in the third quarter Wednesday night and directed the Western Conference leaders a touchdown in five plays.

A 23-yard payoff pass to Brian Kelly at the 3:52 mark broke a 3-3 defensive struggle and launched the Esks to a 23-3 victory over Toronto Argonauts in a Canadian Football League interlocking game played before 48,595 fans at Exhibition Stadium.

It was the fourth straight victory for the defending Grey Cup champs.

In the CFL's other game, Montreal Alouettes disappointed a crowd of 25,947, the biggest midweek throng in Rider history, by defeating the Saskatchewan Roughriders 18-10.

"I'm supposed to come into the game and spark the club, make something happen," Moon said after the game, his head still buzzing from the tackle he put on Argos' Derrick Martin late in the third quarter after the Toronto defensive back had intercepted one of his passes.

That unfamiliar role knocked Moon out of the game.

Moon has made a career of coming on in relief of veteran Tom Wilkinson since he joined the Eskimos.

The Esks, obviously, are looking more to the future for his contributions because they've got his name on a contract designed to keep his services for the next 10 years.

In the meantime, he relishes the explosive situations head coach Hugh Campbell throws him into.

"When I'm on the bench in the first half, I look at certain things that might work and when I get in I just try them," Moon explained.

"I'm not going to go out there and try to run the ball down anybody's throat because I don't think you stay healthy playing that way.

"I have the ability to run and when I see it I'm going to take it."

It was a 19-yard run by the Eskimos' quarterback that set the stage for his touchdown pitch to Kelly.

Ex-Argo fullback Neil Lumsden bulled 19 yards, carrying at least two Toronto defensive backs the final five yards, for the only other TD in the game. Kicker Dave Cutler converted the two scores and added three field goals.

That brought his season's total to 33 points and his career total to 1,501.

Zenon Andrusyshyn, in the Argonaut fans' doghouse after missing a couple of crucial kicks in Toronto's last home game — a 20-16 loss to Ottawa Rough Riders — and being generally erratic since ousting incumbent Ian Sunter from the job, kicked a 43-yard field goal in the second quarter that lifted the Argos into a 3-3 tie. That score held until early in the third quarter.

Montreal, aided by six Saskatchewan turnovers, managed just one touchdown with the remainder of the scoring coming from placekicker Don Sweet.

"We had opportunities we didn't capitalize on," said Montreal head coach Joe Scannella. "Sometimes you play two good quarters and two bad ones.

"Offensively, we played 1½ good ones."

The Als built up a 10-0 lead after one quarter on a two-yard touchdown run by Alvin Walker, followed by a Sweet convert and 24-yard field goal.

It was the Riders' turn in the second 15 minutes as Dwight Edwards teamed with quarterback John Hufnagel to score on a 45-yard pass-and-run play and Bob Macoritti evened things with a convert and 42-yard field goal.

Sweet's 35-yard field goals accounted for all the scoring in the third quarter and he added five more points in the final quarter on a 24-yard field goal and a pair of singles.

Saskatchewan head coach Ron Lancaster, whose club had nipped Hamilton Tiger-Cats 19-18 a week earlier, was noticeably disappointed with the loss after the Riders had stayed without striking distance throughout the contest.

"It seemed like when they decided it was really time to stop us, they stopped us," he said. "When you get the opportunity to come up big, you've gotta come up (big)."

Second-try penalty disaster for 'Caps

Zequinha, given a second chance, scored on a penalty kick Wednesday night as Dallas Tornado defeated Vancouver Whitecaps 2-1 in a North American Soccer League game at Dallas.

The penalty was called at 78:12 when Vancouver defender Peter Roe fouled Omar Gomez in the penalty box.

Vancouver goalkeeper Bruce Grobbelaar saved Zequinha's first shot, but referee Gus Constantine ruled that he moved illegally before the shot and allowed the Dallas player to take the shot again. This time, he made no mistake.

Dallas captain Wolfgang Rausch scored on an assist from Njego Pesa at 5:01.

Vancouver's lone goal was scored at 82:22 by rookie Brent Braling, playing his first professional soccer game, on a rebound after a missed shot by Trevor Whymark.

The result evened the Whitecaps' record at 11-11 and gave them 120 points in their fight for wild card playoff spot.

Meanwhile, Seattle Sounders and Chicago Sting nailed down divisional championships.

Seattle dumped Tulsa Roughnecks 4-1 to clinch the Western Division title and Sting took first place in the Central Division of the American Conference.

Mark Peterson scored two goals in the first 37 minutes to carry Seattle to its 24th win in 29 games this season, before 19,383 in the Kingdome. Roger Davies, the league's No. 2 scorer, ran his point total to 61 by assisting on both of the Peterson's goals.

Frank Barton and Tommy Hutchinson had the other Seattle goals, while Victor Moreland spoiled goalkeeper Jack Brand's shutout bid in the 19th minute.

Karl-Heinz Granitza scored three goals and assisted on three others as the Sting routed Houston Hurricane 7-2.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Kicks whipped Washington Diplomats 5-1, Fort Lauderdale Strikers edged California Surf 2-1, Los Angeles Aztecs beat Rochester Lancers 3-1 and San Diego Sockers nipped Detroit Express 1-0.

Empire Stadium to be demolished in 1983 during rejuvenation of PNE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Empire Stadium, built for the 1954 British Empire Games, will be demolished in 1983.

The outmoded 32,000-seat stadium, home to British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, and Vancouver Whitecaps, defending North American Soccer League champions, will be replaced by 600-car parking lot and an expanded amusement centre.

Demolition is part of a $70-million, five-year plan to rejuvenate the Pacific National Exhibition site.

Citing deterioration of the artificial turf and lack of funds for upgrading, the exhibition board voted Wednesday night to limit use of the sports facility to one event daily starting Feb. 1, 1981. This will cut in half the 670 events held in the stadium in an average year.

In addition, the field will be closed for two months starting Nov. 23, and practices other than those under contract are prohibited immediately.

After 1982, the stadium will no longer be useable, said exhibition president Erwin Swangard.

"When an engineer says it will not last any longer, I believe him," he said. "And the turf out there will not last until 1982."

A covered stadium already has been proposed for the provincial government's proposed B.C. Place on the north shore of False Creek in downtown Vancouver.

Budgets at peak for PNW tourney

Victoria Budgets hold the hot hand going into this weekend's Pacific Northwest Men's Fastball League playoff tournament at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets extended their latest winning streak to a 15th game Wednesday by overpowering the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League all-stars 14-0 at Central Park. Budgets now are 47-12 for the season.

Dave Wilson, Mark Smith and Rob Guenter were in complete command while sharing pitching duties while Dennis Eckert, Warren Campbell and Bob Burrows each connected twice to spark a 10-hit attack.

Eckert provided the game's big blow, a three-run homer, while Alden Govenlock also belted a circuit blow.

Brothers Bob and Ernie Holness were the only McGinnis League players to manage a hit.

The NWL tournament gets under way Friday at Royal Athletic Park with games at 6, 8 and 10 p.m.

Elsewhere on the softball front, New York New York and Island Dryco Breakers got off on the right foot in the Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League playoffs. New York New York edged Bemister's Weleding 1-0 behind Nancy McLachland's two-hit pitching while Pam Jones allowed only four hits and struck out eight as Breakers beat Butler Brothers 6-1.

Denis Archibald's triple and a single aby Theresa Stone accounted for the lone New York New York run.

Sue Molliet paced Breakers with a two-run triple.

Murray Sluggett sparked the assault by driving in four runs with a pair of singles and a triple as Knowles Realty bombed Capital Builders 13-3 in the first game of their Heywood League semi-final seres.

In the Maconald Men's League, Trafalgar Legion went one up in its best-of-three semi-final while Mayfair and Rebels are on equal footing.

Steve Garrett drove in three runs as Mayair triumphed 4-3.

Pitcher Larry Bednarz homered for the winning run in the 14th inning as Rebels clipped Mayfair in the continuation of the opening game that began Wednesday.

Victorians qualify for finals at Henley

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — Three members of the Victoria City Rowing Club won their heats Wednesday to qualify for today's finals in the prestigious 97th Royal Canadian Henley Regatta.

Lisa Roy and Shelly Donald both placed first in their heats of the junior women's singles while Phil Haggerty won his junior 155-pound singles heat.

A total of 40 heats were run off Wednesday to reduce the field for 13 finals today in the international rowing competition which has drawn more than 1,400 competitors from six countries.

Although the powerful St. Catharines Rowing Club, going after its 20th consecutive Henley title, put on its usual strong showing in a variety of categories, both the Victoria City and Kingston Rowing Clubs came up with three victories each in the heats.

Association vote favors Enderby

Victoria amateur baseball officials were unhappy Thursday following a decision by the B.C. Amateur Baseball Association to send a team from Enderby as the provincial representative to the Western Canada senior championship in Glenboro, Man., Aug. 15-17.

Enderby, a community in the Okanagan, and the Victoria All-Stars were the only two undefeated teams when the provincial playoffs in Prince George were halted and then cancelled by rain last weekend.

B.C. Association president George Connelly said Enderby was chosen because it had the best runs for-and-against record. Victoria took second place.

Manager Tim Rogers of the Victoria team said the All-Stars offered to go to Vancouver or even to Enderby for a playoff game but the B.C. association vetoed the Vancouver game, claiming it wasn't possible to rent a park.

The Victoria officials then contacted the Enderby club and offered to travel to the Okanagan for any kind of a playoff but, after initially agreeing to a playoff Enderby reversed its stand and told the Victoria club there was no way it would take part in one.

"It's a shame," said Rogers. "This is without doubt the finest team Victoria has had in years and we aren't being allowed a chance to defend the Western Canada title that we won a year ago."

Coe, Ovett to run

LONDON (Reuter) — British middle-distance Olympic gold medallists Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett will run in an international athletics meeting at Crystal Palace Friday — but in separate events.

Coe, who won the Olympic 1,500 metres title to avenge a defeat by Ovett in the 800, will take part in the 800. Ovett steps up to the 5,000 metres.

B.C. track body criticized after UVic meet cancelled

The University of Victoria has had to cancel its invitational track and field meet scheduled for Friday night at Centennial Stadium because it hasn't attracted enough athletes.

Billed as "a tightly-scheduled, entertaining sports event" featuring top local and Olympic team athletes, the meet was called off Wednesday as most of the competitors the organizers thought were coming are, in fact, going elsewhere.

And meet director Ron Bowker, suddenly left without a meet to direct, was hopping mad, saying he felt they were being shafted from within by the B.C. Track and Field Association.

Despite the fact the UVic meet was put on the fixtures list two months ago, the B.C. Association is sending a senior team to compete in Everett, Wash., this weekend, he pointed out. And at the same time, the province is sending a full junior team to Edmonton.

"That's 50 or 60 of our potential athletes gone right there!" Bowker said. "And the Association has sanctioned an invitational mile during the halftime break at the Vancouver Whitecap soccer game at Empire Stadium Saturday."

Problems didn't end there, either, for Bowker and the UVic organizers as a 14-man B.C. road running team, including Mike Creery and Randy Cox of Victoria, left Wednesday to compete in championships in New Zealand.

"On top of all this, Debbie Scott and Debbie Brill have left to compete in Europe," Bowker explained.

He said he felt badly for the fans and the sponsors but didn't think they could go on advertising it as an attraction when no stars were going to appear.

The Findlay. It's more than a cozy wood burning friend.

It's as dependable as the Conestogo wagon of old but with new ideas. To begin with it's made of heavy steel plate welded into an efficient airtight unit. We lined the inside with fire bricks and then added Thermocord gaskets to the cast iron doors for a positive airtight seal. Then we built in a baffle system for the most efficient burning up to 12 hours. There's a practical ash catch at the front, the doors open wide enough for a 20" log and the 5/16" steel cooktop provides a surface for cooking or warming.

An excellent feature of the Conestogo is that the body of the stove is one piece wrap around body which lessens the chance of weld cracks and air leaks. The decorator, wooden handles, and the cast iron doors are outstanding. The unique Conestogo wagon design is cast in three dimensional detail and the wheels of the wagon are spin type draft controls, which provide for maximum control of the fire for all night burning. The sturdy steel decorator legs add more good looks and, when you open the doors for full enjoyment of the fire, the Conestogo is more than a cheerful wood burning friend — it's an all Canadian made Findlay.

Liverpool, Notts Favored

LONDON (Reuter) — The English soccer season kicks off Saturday with the traditional carefree meeting of the League champions and the Cup winners for the Charity Shield at Wembley.

Liverpool, which won the League last season for the fourth time in five years, and Second Division West Ham United, which upset London neighbors Arsenal in the Football Association Cup final, will be expected to serve up a scenesetter for the 10 months of action to follow.

It is difficult to imagine that Liverpool will slip up in its bid for a third successive title. In two seasons it has proved invincible at home.

Its last league defeat at Anfield was on Jan. 21, 1978, when Trevor Francis scored the winner to give Birmingham a 3-2 victory.

Liverpool's stiffest challenge is likely to come from Francis's present club, Nottingham Forest, though the England international striker will be missing from the European Cup holders lineup.

Francis is still struggling to overcome an Achilles injury suffered last season.

Francis's international colleague, Garry Birtles, is another likely absentee. Following an argument with the manager over the length of his holidays, Birtles has been placed on the transfer list.

The price on Birtles's head is $2.4 million, which is precisely the sum paid Coventry for striker Ian Wallace.

Much will also depend on how quickly Swiss ace Ramondo Ponte settles in.

The only title Arsenal won last season was the tag of The Unluckiest Team.

Arsenal spent $2.4 million on a new striker. But their fans excitement at the signing of 19-year-old Clive Allen must be tempered by the disappointment of losing Irish superstar Liam Brady to Juventus of Italy.

Manchester United, which finished two points behind Liverpool in the championship race, will be pushed to scale such lofty heights again.

The United defence, built round the polished by aging Martin Buchan, is prone to ludicrous mistakes, while rugged striker Joe Jordan finds it difficult to score.

But, for the opening weeks at least, all the big names will be overshadowed as neutrals keep a close check on Southampton's performance.

Its tiny ground, with a capacity of only 26,000, will be overflowing for Kevin Keegan's home debut.

The European Footballer of the Year could have signed with any club in the world when his contract with Hamburg in West Germany expired, but instead chose a side that has never won the league and won the Cup for the only time in its 95-year history in 1976.

The loss of Steve Archibald to Tottenham Hotspur will greatly reduce Aberdeen's chances of retaining the Socttish Premier Division championship.

Three-year pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Midfielder Vladislav Bogicevic has signed a three-year contract with New York Cosmos. Bogicevic, 29, joined the Cosmos from the Red Star team of Belgrade in 1978.

Rads take series lead

Lumberworld's hit total was exactly double its rival but Capital Radiators turned things around where it counted — on the scoreboard — to grab the opening game in the best-of-three Cosmopolitan Senior Amateur Baseball League semi-finals.

Caps managed only four hits, including a key, two-run single by centre fielder Duane Pack in the fifth inning, but made the most of them to defeat Lumberworld 4-2.

Teams meet again tonight. A third game, if needed, is set for Friday.

Pitcher Dale Aune scattered eight hits to claim the pitching decision.

Old Snort: nothing but gas

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — When the developer from California asked a drilling company to drill him a well near here, he wanted water. Instead he got natural gas.

"He said, 'Plug it up! I don't want gas, I want water,' " said Larry Stoican, one of the men asked to drill the well on the Miller Peninsula, east of Sequim Bay.

The developer later said he would try to harness the fuel.

Bill Webber, the employee who drilled what they now call Old Snort, said the well behaved like Mount St. Helens when he reached the 83-metre level on July 21.

He said he noticed then that his equipment was not behaving normally.

"The cable lost tension because of the pressure from below," he said. "I started taking in line, and sand and gravel started puffing up around the opening."

The well erupted after he removed his equipment from the hole — spewing sand and gravel 30 to 50 metres feet in the air.

The discovery is rare for the area. Drillers had encountered small amounts of gas near the site, but few, if any wells like Old Snort were known to exist.

For now, the well is capped until the developer can determine what to do with the gas. But in the meantime, he still wants water and the drillers will try again.

Cardiac device real shocker

BOSTON (AP) — Cardiac arrest, killer of 300,000 Americans each year, may be prevented with a tiny implanted device that automatically zaps a victim's heart with life-saving jolts of electricity, doctors say.

The device — a miniature version of the bulky emergency room defibrillator — has been implanted in the chests of six people to deliver bursts of electricity when their hearts begin beating irregularly.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins University and Sinai Hospital in Baltimore say they have successfully tested the device and found it causes "no undue discomfort." Like pacemakers, it is permanently buried in the heart patients' chests, and both devices can be used at the same time.

A report on the first use of the device, invented by Dr. Michel Mirowski, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

When people's hearts stop beating regularly, medical technicians must reach them within minutes with externally held shocking machines or they will die. Sometimes, the help arrives too late.

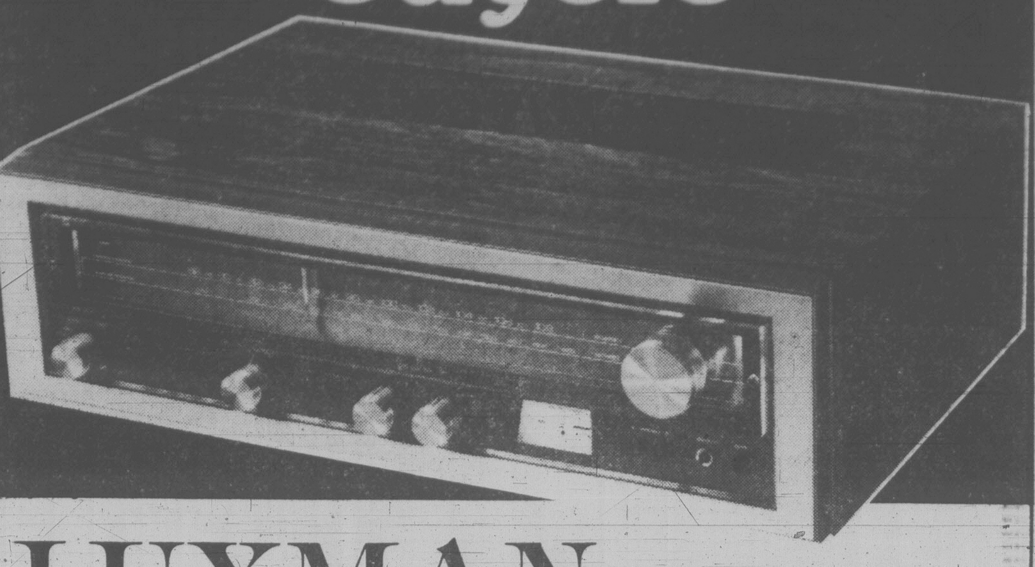
The new machine, about the size of a package of cigarettes, delivers a shock when it senses a specific kind of arrhythmia, or abnormal heartbeat, called ventricular fibrillation.

During one seizure, the device can deliver up to four blasts of electricity, the last two more powerful than the first two.

"It's a kind of protection that currently is not available to the high-risk patient," Mirowski said in an interview. "It provides services that are available only in the coronary care unit."

Mirowski noted that an external defibrillator requires a team of technicians who diagnose the problem and then operate the machine.

However, he said his device "monitors the heart automatically for years and then, when the life-threatening arrhythmia occurs, it identifies the arrhythmia and makes the therapeutic decision. Within 15 to 20 seconds after the onset of the arrhythmia, it delivers automatically the defibrillating shock."



For first time buyers

LUXMAN

Luxman are 1030 (shown) only $399.95. Other models from $299.00 to $2745.00.

For some strange reason it is often assumed that first time stereo buyers will choose cheap (and sometimes nasty) equipment, when assembling their first music system.

After a while — the length of time probably depending on their income — they are still not getting the results they hoped for, and having learned something of HI-FI by now, they ask their dealer about the better units, and what he would recommend. The rest of this story will depend on the advice given, and the knowledge gained out of what has become a long and expensive experience.

LUX Audio builds some of the finest stereo components money can buy. Lux gives the best musical reproduction that modern technology can achieve, it has long term reliability, and it won't become outdated in six months. Just check the "Stereo for Sale" column (#98) in the classified section of recent issues of this paper, and see how few Lux owners are parting with their equipment.

Get it right first time~get Lux

We, at CAV, believe that most people want to get it right — THE FIRST TIME! That's why we recommend LUXMAN.

Yes, LUXMAN stereo costs a bit more than ordinary HI-FI, but we think it very much cheaper than doing it the hard way! Drop in, and audition a LUX — today!

Former cult leader Charles Manson has emerged from a decade of solitary confinement to work as a gardener and maintenance man at the Protestant chapel in Vacaville State Prison. "It's taken 10 years to get a breath of fresh air; I'm not about to do anything that will screw it up," said the 45-year-old Manson.

At a cost of $195 a head, Ottawa residents will be invited to attend a one-day seminar Oct. 21 on Canada-U.S. relations, starring Henry Kissinger, the former U.S. state secretary in the Nixon and Ford administrations. Kissinger will share the podium with two former Canadian external affairs ministers — Flora MacDonald and Mitchell Sharp, as well as U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell, a leading spokesman on the fisheries dispute between both countries.

Wiesenthal

Hometown contestant Gerry Prefontaine won first prize for the fourth successive year with his small, green entry J. C. in the 11th annual Frog Follies at St. Pierre-Jolys, Man. His yearling frog outdistanced rivals on three leaps to hop off with the $250 prize for his owner.

In a White House ceremony, U.S. president Jimmy Carter presented a special gold medal to Simon Wiesenthal, 72, who has spent 30 years hunting Nazis.

Governor-General Ed Schreyer and his family will visit Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia later this month. On Aug. 17 he travels to Victoria to present the first Schreyer Cup to the winner of an all-star match of the Canadian Soccer Association. The teams will be made up of players from every province.

As far as Joan Baez is concerned, radical still is right and "Bob Dylan now produces horrible music." She's in Athens for a concert and says she isn't being treated fairly these days — that, "The motives for my actions are humanitarian rather than political. For this reason, I was once considered a leftist and now I am accused of being a rightist reactionary." As for Dylan — once the darling of the counterculture, but now a born-again Christian: "Until 1970, he wrote some of the most radical songs. Songs that expressed the climate of change in the country. Then he turned to religion and wrote songs with Christian messages. Horrible music just like his film."

Dear Abby:

This problem concerns my sister. She is 38, married for 12 years, and as far as I know, not very happily. Her husband is a good man, but he is "weak" and has no voice in the household, which is probably part of the problem, because my sister has become a compulsive TV watcher, compulsive eater, and now a compulsive drinker.

Her husband has tried to correct these problems, but maybe he didn't try hard enough or he gave up too easily. I am very worried about my sister. She has three young children, and God only knows how they're going to grow up, watching their mother sit in front of the TV all the time with a drink in her hand. She stays in her pajamas all day because she's overweight and doesn't dress up.

Everyone in the family is worried about her, but she won't listen to ayone. Please don't suggest professional help, because she tried it once and it didn't work for her.

Any ideas on how we can get her to be the positive, happy person she once was will be appreciated by me and all the members of our family.

Worried Sister

Dear Worried:

Sorry. The only suggestion I can offer is professional help. The fact that your sister tried it "once" without success doesn't mean that it will never work for her. Therapy sometimes fails because the patient and therapist do not relate well, in which case the patient should try another therapist. Or possibly the patient expects an immediate miracle. Successful treatment takes time.

You cared enough for your sister to write to me. Now care a little more and try to persuade her that she needs outside help. If you can get her to Alcoholics Anonymous or Overeaters Anonymous it would be a good start.

Dear Abby:

Do you know of a way to test one's own breath to find out if it is unpleasant or offensive?

My employer, who is young enough to be my son, always takes several steps backward whenever I approach him, as though my breath is offensive to him. No one else — man or woman — does this. Nor have I seen my employer react this way to anyone except me.

My doctor says my breath is fine. My dentist confirms this. My best friend says I am foolish to be concerned.

By the way, I am certain that I do not have a body odor because I am meticulous about my person, and have been complimented often on my "fresh fragrance." Please help me.

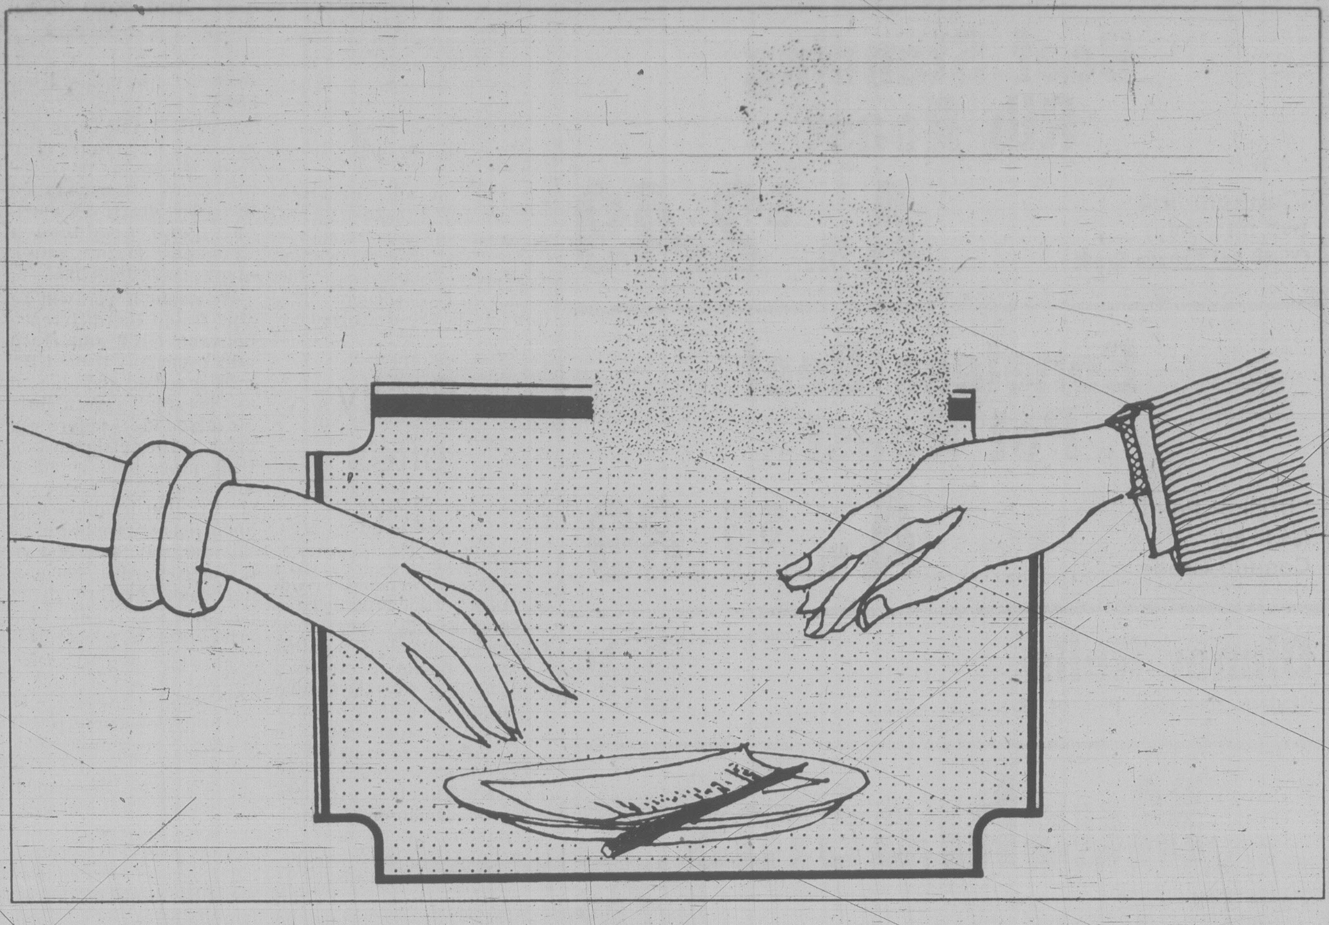
Bad Breath (?)

Dear Breath:

If your doctor, dentist and best friend have assured you that your breath is not offensive, perhaps your employer is either allergic to, or offended by, that "fresh fragrance" you've been complimented on so often. Tell your employer what's on your mind and clear the air!

Now everyone's picking up the tab

By VICTORIA IRWIN
Christian Science Monitor



It's no longer unusual for Jill to take John out to lunch or dinner at a nice restaurant.

In a recent Gallup survey, 65 per cent of the women polled said they were willing to treat a man to a social lunch or dinner. And 75 per cent of the men surveyed said they were not uncomfortable when a woman did pick up the tab.

"If I want to get to know someone, it's natural to ask them out," said Sally Davis, who works in a social research firm in Cambridge, Mass. "I feel great when I treat a man."

But there still are some folks who find it hard to break tradition, even if they espouse equality.

"I know of women who have given the money to men under the table in order to let them pay," said Sue Lafky of Portland, Ore., who added that she has no qualms about handling a dinner check herself.

Tony Sell, a designer who lives near Chicago, Ill., prefers to pay when he goes out with a woman.

"That is the way I was brouht up, that men should treat women," he said. But he doesn't mind when women friends treat in a casual situation.

"I think it is completely normal," he said. "It's usually when good friends get together, and the woman wants to treat."

Some women meet resistance when they offer to pay for a meal. One woman planning to buy dinner for a man went to the bank to get crisp, clean bills. At the end of the meal, the man refused to let her bring out the money and insisted that she pay him back later that evening with a check.

Other women bristle at that attitude.

"I like to be the one to pay at the table, if I have invited the man," said Sally Davis. "The man is flattered that I am interested enough to ask him out, but he can't always let go of his role. I don't think his ego can take it."

Most men are happy when a woman offers to treat, but few say it happens regularly. Going "Dutch," which means that each pays his or her own way, is the most common compromise young couples make.

Hal Hiemstgra of Washington, D.C., prefers to split the bill, and he is not always pleased when a woman expects he will pay for a meal, unless it is clear that it is a special occasion.

"I think it is unfair with prices the way they are that one person has to take care of a $20 or $30 check," he said. To avoid the confusion of dividing a check in a restaurant, he sometimes will pay the dinner bill and suggest that his friend buy the movie or theatre tickets.

Some women feel uncomfortable letting a man pay for meals all the time, however, and they prefer to pay their own way. One, who makes more than the man she goes out with, likes to be treated to a nice breakfast, which is less expensive than a fancy dinner. And when he does spring for an evening meal, the woman makes sure she balances his extravagance by taking him out or making a home-cooked meal.

Both men and women report that waiters and waitresses automatically bring the check to the man. Sometimes even after a woman has put down cash or a credit card, the change or receipt will be brought to the man.

Some restaurants are changing, though. One national chain, the Magic Pan, has instructed its personnel not to assume that men will pay and to be alert as to who is treating.

A woman who wants to avoid embarrassing exchanges of checks and money when taking a man out to eat can ease the situation. She can make the reservation and put it under her name as Miss, Ms. or Mrs. Jill Jones. She also may let the maitre d', waiter or waitress know from the start that she will be paying.

If she eats at one restaurant often for business lunches in which she picks up the tab, she can leave her business card and try to have the same waiter consistently.

A veteran treater will take the lead in ordering to signal that she also will pay, although this doesn't always work.

In handling the bill, some women suggest using a credit card, to avoid the shuffling of paper money at the table.

Twenty minutes good but her book smelled

Matcham . . . she didn't get the hook

WINNIPEG (CP) — One interview is enough to shatter illusions about the glamor of being a talk show guest, says Linda Matchan, whose first book thrust her into the sometimes zany world o)f book promotion.

The Winnipeg-born author of The Ancient Jews: How They Lived in Canaan, said she was non-plussed when the host of a local television talk show told her the interview would last just as long as she was "good."

Matchan, who wrote the history book for children aged eight to 12, said the warning conjured up the image of a stagehand, waiting in the wings to yank her from the studio if she faltered.

The young journalist, now living in Boston, was judged to be good — the interview ran 20 minutes before the host indicated they were out of time.

"I was relieved because I felt I had done a good job," Matchan said.

But suddenly, with the TV cameras still running, the interviewer buried her nose in the handsomely-illustrated children's book.

She criticized the smell of the book and concluded she wouldn't buy it for her own children, said Matchan, incredulously.

"I thought of a million things I could have said afterwards," said the ginger-haired writer. "You feel so much like merchandise."

Raised in Winnipeg, Matchan graduated in 1975 from Carleton University in Ottawa.

Her first job was at CBC "getting toast for the news editor and (doing) the coffee rounds."

"It was the worst four months of my life."

Later, Matchan worked as a medical reporter on a Winnipeg newspaper, then quit to try her hand as a free-lance writer.

"After a year of free-lancing I felt I'd had enough of Winnipeg," she said. "Journalistically there didn't seem to be much more to learn."

She intended to move to Toronto.

"But I got married and my husband wanted to go to Boston to study at Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

Matchan now does free-lance work for The Boston Globe, writing a twice-monthly column about some of the city's off-beat characters.

Her book grew out of a chance meeting in 1978 in Banff with a man from a publishing firm that has a series of books on ancient civilization.

"One night at a party I met a representative from Douglas and McIntyre Ltd., the Vancouver publishers. Without planning to, I asked if he had anything for me to do. The result is The Ancient Jews.

After moving to Boston, Matchan began research immediately, camping out in the city's public library. The assignment was a lonely one at the beginning.

"But I couldn't get a work permit so the book got all my attention."

An archeologist helped her with the book, which deals with 1,500 years when the Jews lived in Canaan, between the periods of captivity by the Egyptians and Babylonians. He showed her some of the actual implements that were used by the ancient Jews.

"That really made the whole thing come alive."

Allergy-prone have histamine surplus

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

We all use anthihistamine drugs in our family. We are highly allergic. It never before occurred to me to ask, "What is the histamine that the antihistanmines fight"? This is a question my teenage son put to me.

J.H.J.

Dear J.H.J.:

Histamine is an important substance produced in many cells and tissues in the body. It is involved in many of the sensitive body balance mechanisms. So important is it that many international scientific groups constantly seek to untangle its vital and complicated functions in health and disease.

Histamine seems to play an important role in body growth and blood circulation.

It is well-known that excess amounts of histamine are found in people who have severe allergies, asthma, hives, hay fever and angioneurotic edema. This latter is a swelling of the face, the lips, the tongue and the larynx.

Antihistamines, therefore, are chemical substances which are used to combat or to dilute excess histamines, in order to reduce the symptoms of allergy.

Dear Doctor:

My fiance is a wonderful man. He has everything going for him. Every once in a while he goes through a period of having such bad breath that it's almost intolerable for me. He notices it, too, and feels awful about it. What could be the cause?

G.E.G.

Dear G.E.G.:

The presence of bad breath can be psychologically devastating. It is important that every avenue be explored to find the cause.

Scrupulous mouth hygiene and the frequent use of one of the many available mouth washes must surely have occurred to both of you. This should be maintained while the basic cause is being investigated.

The most common causes of bad breath, or halitosis, are infections of the teeth, the gums, the tonsils and the sinuses. Chronic bronchitis, emphysema and bronchiectasis must be ruled out. Certain stomach and intestinal conditions are often accused of being the cause, but rarely is this substantiated.

Some diets contain hidden amounts of garlic, onions, herbs and spices that can be responsible.

It is also well-known that some drugs, singly or in combination with others, can do the same thing. I'm sure that you know that pipe smoking, cigar smoking and cigarette smoking also can be responsible.

With his doctor's help, your fiance should be able to find the cause of his problem.

UHT milk spurs new queries

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

Q. When grocery shopping recently, I was surprised to see cartons of milk sitting side-by-side on shelves with fruit juices. Why wan't this milk in the refrigerated section along with other milk products?

A. What you saw was UHT milk. This may be new to your area as it is being introduced at different times in different sections of the country. It has been available in Quebec since 1975 and more recently in Alberta and British Columbia.

UHT stands for ultra high temperature. This means that the milk has been sterilized by heating to over 135 degrees C for two to five seconds. The bacteria are destroyed by the heat so the milk will not spoil.

Sterilization is an old method of preserving foods. However, the older processes often changed the color, destroyed nutrients, and produced a "cooked" flavor which many people don't like.

We doubt if you will be able to tell the difference between UHT and fresh milk especially if the UHT milk is cooled and allowed to "breathe" (get a little air mixed in it) before you drink it. The nutrient loss in UHT processing is about the same as for normal sterilization of milk — only about ten per cent loss of its thiamin, folic acid and vitamin B12. Also, because light cannot get through the package, less riboflavin is lost during storage. (Ultraviolet light destroys riboflavin.)

The major advantage of UHT milk, of course, is that it doesn't need to be refrigerated . . . until it is opened. Once it's opened, you must treat it like regular fresh milk and it must be kept in the refrigerator.

The cost of UHT milk is about the same as that of fresh milk.

The square packages typical of the UHT milk are easy to store in cupboards for a handy extrahome supply. A bonus, for example, for vacationers returning home late from a holiday . . . there would be milk on hand for morning cereal and coffee. Or it can be taken on camping trips, picnics or in lunch packs.

UHT homogenized, two per cent, and chocolate milk, as well as half-and-half cream are available now in parts of Canada. Other sterilized foods such as fruit juices, puddings, and custards, are popular in Europe. Some juices are available here now; Other foods may be introduced shortly.

These sterilized products may help the country's energy budget. No refrigeration is needed at any stage of production, transportation or storage. It has been estimated that the U.S. could save 12 million barrels of oil a year by switching to sterilized milk.

Q. I cannot drink much milk without getting an upset stomach. Are there any products I can use beside lactase tablets or drops?

A. Not yet, but there may be nefore long. The company which developed the system for packaging UHT milk has been studying the problem for several years. They now can add small amounts of bacteria-free lactase to the milk after it has been heat-treated. The enzyme lactase slowly program in Thailand. It is breaks down the lactose in the milk. By the time the milk is on the grocery shelves, about ninety per cent of the lactose has been digested.

This special 'lactose free'' milk is currently being used for a school milk not available in Canada. But if it is introduced here it could help many people enjoy and benefit from milk and milk products who normally are lactose intolerant.

Brolly bites dog

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Dog-gnawed meter readers in Portland finally have come up with a counter-canine techinque. It's called an umbrella. Meterman Jim Fudge says the sudden opening of a spring-loaded bumbershoot seems to flummox the fiercest of watchdogs — that he tried it first against a couple of Dobermans who guarded their master's meter. "I popped them once and they ran behind a trailer ... I popped them a second time. They went behind the trailer and stayed there." Alan Farnsworth wasn't so lucky — but only because the dog in question had cataracts and couldn't see the umbrella, let alone distinguish it from its owner. The dog got the umbrella. Farnsworth just got out.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 17-year-old male. I come from a good family and I have lots of friends and am considered good-looking. But I am deeply depressed because I'm a homosexual. No one realizes what it's like to be a homosexual. It's like having a handicap. I never wanted to be one. I guess I was born with it. The thought of it disgusts me. No one konws I am one and I never intend telling anyone. Please, can you tell me how I can get rid of my problem? Can I get psychiatric help? (I don't have any money.) Can I do anything. Please. I'm almost on the verge of killing myself.

Answer: Let me address the easy questions first. Your lack of money should not be an impediment to getting psychotherapeutic help. In this age of Medicare, you should be able to get psychiatric or other treatment at any one of many mental health clinics in general or psychiatric hospitals.

But the goals of the treatment are open to question. First and foremost, your depression and suicidal thoughts must be alleviated. You tie these exclusively to homosexuality, and you might be right. A homosexual individual may be depressed because he would like to be heterosexual, or because he feels harassed by society or for any number of reasons that anyone else gets depressed. You state that you are definitely homosexual, and that you want to "get rid of (your) problem."

I will accept the former declaration, but just want to remind you that at your age, sexual orientation can be in a state of confusion. As far as the latter is concerned, there is a debate raging today as to the indications and effectiveness of this form of therapy. If you want to change your orientation that badly, and you have a good psychiatrist, I assume that you will approximate your goals.

But we are not talking about a frivolous or easy procedure. Any psychotherapist you see will want to have long talks with you before embarking on this single-minded journey.

If this is something you would like to share with your parents — read Laura Hobson's Consenting Adult, in paperback everywhere.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 16-year-old boy with a long and aggravating problem.

Two years ago at school I met a girl I really liked. During that school year I had the opportunity to meet and talk to her. We got along well and looked each other in the eye when we spoke, but the conversations were too short and infrequent.

This was because I had a lot of homework and I can't go anywhere without completing it. In my next school year, I was still grounded by homework. I then became depressed and sometimes can't cope with my schoolwork, which gave me bad marks.

Soon I was losing interest in family affairs and got hot-tempered more often. I didn't mention any of this to my parents because she has a different nationality and they'll give me hell if I do.

Answer: You are naturally introspective and conscientious, and to this has been added loneliness and depression. Your parents do not seem to be helpful, and you have difficulty communicating with your school counsellor. You should get help before your depression gets worse.

There are at least two things about yourself which should encourage you: You have the right ideas about a good communicative relationship, in which people look each other in the eye, and you are able to work out for yourself the nature of your problems.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I read recently about tampons causing a serious illness. I and most of my friends use tampons but are worried that we might become ill. Should I stop using tampons?

Answer: No. Do not stop using tampons.

There was a recent report on an illness called Toxic Shock Syndrome. This is a very rare occurrence but the few cases reported affected women between the ages of 13 and 52 years of age, during or soon after their menstrual periods. Since it is a newly recognized illness very little is known about its cause.

Although it was found that women who became ill had used tampons throughout their menstrual periods, it is extremely unlikely that tampons caused the disease.

About 70 per cent of all women in this country use tampons during menstruation and this illness is very rare.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Baby formula 'just junk food'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Infant formulas are "junk food" and should be sold by prescription only, say researchers who note that ingredients listed on the cans are "not much different from a candy label."

Two University of Southern California researchers said Thursday they particularly object to two additives commonly found in instant formula which could make babies more susceptible to disease — carrageenan and coconut oil.

Dr. Paul Fleiss, an assistant clinical professor of pediatrics, and Dr. Jay Gordon, an attending clinical physician, called the formula a child's first introduction to junk food.

"Look at the label on a can of formula," Gordon said. "It's not much different from a candy label. A typical can of infant formula contains modified homogenized milk, sugar, water and a host of additives."

Carrageenan, used to stabilize milk protein, is believed by many researchers to increase a baby's susceptibility to necrotizing enterocolitis — a disease marked by the destruction of tissue in the gastrointestinal tract.

Miniature defibrillator tried by six patients

health digest

Doctors in Baltimore have successfully implanted small, battery-powered devices in the chests of heart patients which deliver life-saving electric shocks when the patients suffer cardiac arrest.

Until now, the only treatment for this attack was a quick jolt of electricity from an externally held machine. But victims quickly lose consciousness as their blood circulation stops and often help arrives too late to save them.

Now doctors working at Johns Hopkins Medical School and Sinai Hospital of Baltimore say they have implanted miniature versions of these machines in the chests of six people.

The devices automatically deliver bursts of electricity when the patients' hearts begin to beat irregularly.

The new instrument is a miniature, automated version of a defibrillator, a bulky machine used by ambulance crews and hospital emergency teams.

With puzzles and games, a University of Ottawa nursing professor plans to take the anti-smoking message to 10-year-olds.

"We want to show children in a fun way what smoking can do to them," said Agnes Lao, who received a $6,000 federal grant for the project.

Lao says most children experiment with cigarettes at 11, and she wants to stop that first puff by showing children the dangers and expense of smoking.

The puzzles and games, published in a 20-page book, will also help children fight peer pressure, which Lao says is one of the greatest influences on young smokers.

Canadians should reduce all fats in their diet and not wait for researchers to agree on just what damage fat does to their health, says Montreal nutritionist Louise Lambert-Lagace.

"Fat is the monster in our eating pattern," she said as she prepared to welcome 1,100 nutrition experts to a recent conference of the Society for Nutrition Education.

Lambert-Lagace said she believes that there is already enough evidence that consumption of fats — including those found in meat, oils, hydrogenated fats and dairy products — is harmful.

A bee sting usually evokes little more than a few curses and an itchy red lump but for Terry Shields, a sting can be fatal.

Sometimes, just before slipping into unconsciousness, the 37-year-old farmer from Greely, near Ottawa, can remember feeling the tiny sting.

"The last three times I wound up in hospital and I didn't know what happened," he says.

His allergic reaction to insect venom causes his throat tissues to swell. Without immediate medical treatment, Shields would suffocate.

In 50 years, will a 75-year-old with cancer be allowed to die because society cannot afford to help seemingly non-productive people?

Will people live in a utopian society where the body's own healing powers can be invoked to maintain health and produce cures that are impossible now?

Or will the whole show simply collapse into a primitive state where health care is virtually non-existent?

At the recent Global Conference on the Future delegates pictured different ways health care might develop.

Dr. Russell Jaffe, a professor at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences at Bethesda, Md., said the patient of the future could find himself in institutions more like health resorts than today's hospitals.

Jaffe also said nutrition and natural products would be better understood and used to avoid the side effects of synthetic materials.

13 die for plotting Iran coup

By The Associated Press

A firing squad executed 13 more Iranian officers and enlisted men at dawn today for taking part in the plot to overthrow Ayatollah Khomeini's regime, Tehran Radio reported. A 14th man, a former brigadier general in the shah's SAVAK secret police, also was put to death.

The deaths of the alleged anti-Khomeini plotters brought to more than 50 the number of people executed for planning the coup, which Iranian officials said they discovered last month before it was implemented.

The broadcast said the 13 included three pilots, one infantry colonel, two infantry majors, one infantry sergeant and several other non-commissioned officers, some of whom were described as paratroopers.

Tehran Radio said the 13 were condemned to death "as corrupters of the earth and warriors against God on charges of rising against the Imam (Khomeini) and the Islamic Republic of Iran and of having had such powerful supporters and mobilizers as America and Israel." Iranian officials have charged those two countries with complicity in the plot.

The radio identified the 14th man executed today as former Brig.-Gen. Hoseyn Torabi. It said he was convicted of having arrested members of the anti-shah clergy and of having "tortured and maimed strugglers and militants."

The broadcast said Torabi originally was sentenced to 15 years in prison, but a revolutionary court reconsidered the case Wednesday, voided the jail term and imposed death.

Tehran Radio called the release Wednesday of 191 Iranians from U.S. federal jails in New York an American defeat "in the face of the brave struggles of our beloved sisters and brothers."

But there was no word whether their release would affect Iran's announced intention to begin trying 52 American hostages as spies. The hostages began their 278th day in captivity today.

In New York, guarded by 250 police and jeered by a handful of New Yorkers, about 70 Iranian demonstrators boarded vans and cars under cover of darkness and left an Islamic centre following an angry protest by 400 people that stymied their attempts to return to Washington.

The Iranians left the centre in small groups for four vans and seven cars provided by the American Indian Movement. As the caravan pulled away, followed by a police escort, 20 anti-Iranian protesters shouted insults and obscenities at the pro-Khomeini demonstrators.

Most of the Iranians released in the United States travelled to Washington, D.C., where they planned more demonstrations.

Mugabe aide charged

SALISBURY (AP) — A senior black Zimbabwe cabinet minister, Edgar Tekere, faces trial and a possible death sentence after being charged with the murder of a white farmer. The slaying sent a new wave of fear through the 200,000 whites who remained after Rhodesia became independent Zimbabwe.

Police said Tekere will be held in custody until he is brought to trial. It was not immediately known when he would appear in court. The maximum penalty for murder in Zimbabwe is execution by hanging.

Tekere, 43, is minister of manpower and planning in Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's three-month-old black-majority government. As secretary general of Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union party, he ranks only behind the prime minister and Deputy Prime Minister Simon Muzenda in the government hierarchy.

Tekere was arrested Wednesday after being chauffeur-driven to Salisbury's central police station following three sessions of interrogation by white officers of the criminal investigation department.

Tekere is a militant challenger of Mugabe's moderate policies towards whites who ruled Rhodesia for nine decades before it became independent Zimbabwe on April 18.

Afghan gov't faction get Soviet 'treatment'

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Leaders of an Afghan government faction opposed to the Soviet occupation and reportedly on the verge of siding with Moslem rebels against the Kabul regime have been sent to the Soviet Union, an authoritative Pakistani newspaper said today.

The English-language newspaper, The Muslim quoted Radio Kabul and the official government newspaper New Times as saying top ministers and generals of the Khalq faction have been sent to Moscow for "medical treatment."

The feuding between the Khalq faction and the Parcham group led by Afghan President Babrak Karmal has led to nightly assassinations of rival political figures and threatened the Kabul government's hold on the shattered Afghan army.

Sayaf Ful, an Afghan guerrilla leader, told The Muslim that cooperation between the Moslem insurgents and the Khalqis to topple the Karmal government and push the estimated 85,000 Soviet troops out of Afghanistan was "very much imminent."

Another Pakistani newspaper, the government-controlled Pakistan Times, said the Soviets have assured Karmal that they are "ready to go to any extent" to consolidate his government.

The Muslim said the Khalqi leaders were taken to Moscow last month, long before the start of the Olympic Games in Moscow.

Kabul Radio also said Wednesday night Afghan troops and security forces fighting anti-government insurgents had put out of action bands of "terrorists" in two provinces.

The broadcast said Afghan troops clashed with a total of 25 "agents of imperialism and Chinese hirelings" in three villages of Engeel district in southern Herat province.

Bologna suspect put in jail

NICE, France (AP) — A French magistrate today jailed Marco Affatigato, the right-wing Italian extremist suspected in the Bologna, Italy, railroad station bombing.

The suspect was jailed pending a decision by a higher court on an Italian extradition request. It was not known when the extradition case would be heard.

In Bologna, authorities said the 77th person died today of injuries suffered in Saturday's blast. She was identified as Silvana Serravalli, 34, a teacher from Bari, Italy. Her two daughters, also injured in the blast, remained in critical condition at a Bologna hospital.

New junta in Bolivia raps U.S.

LA PAZ (AP) — The new military junta marked Bolivia's traditional independence day Wednesday with a sharp attack on the United States and Andean Common Market countries, and a promise to relieve the country's economic woes through an austerity program.

President Luis Garcia Meza delivered the annual message commemorating independence from Spain at the presidential palace where he and his colleagues began their coup three weeks ago. The coup ousted the interim President Lidia Gueiler and thwarted the Congress's appointment of a left-leaning president.

The military junta cancelled the traditional independence day rally in La Paz, and strengthened military patrols in La Paz and elsewhere in case of violence. Heavily-armed troops in combat gear roamed the streets in armored cars and trucks.

Gov't hid N-test dangers: panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government deliberately concealed radiation dangers from people living downwind of atomic tests in the 1950s and 1960s and should pay damages to innocent victims, charges a House of Representatives subcommittee.

The panel, in a draft report released Wednesday, said the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission "not only disregarded, but actually suppressed" all evidence of harmful effects from radiation given off by atmospheric tests at its Nevada Test Site.

The subcommittee said the country owes a moral debt to those who relied on false assurances of safety during the tests and should not force radiation victims to battle for damages through the courts.

"It is all the more pitiful that the forgotten human beings — the guinea pigs of our country's atomic bomb testing — have in some cases had to wait nearly 20 years just to have their cries heard," said Representative Bob Eckhardt (Dem. Tex.), the subcommittee chairman.

The subcommittee's report charged that the AEC deliberately discouraged health studies and concealed information on radiation hazards. The panel said statistics have shown Utah residents, many of whom were in the path of fallout from the blasts, have higher rates of leukemia, thyroid cancer and thyroid abnormalities than would ordinarily be expected.

Indeed, the subcommittee said, the AEC had known since 1953 of the potential health hazards of eating or drinking contaminated foods, but did not try to stop infants or children from drinking milk from cows grazing downwind of the test site.

Although such milk can carry radioactive Iodine-131, which tends to concentrate in the thyroid gland, the report said the AEC refused to monitor the milk until 1957. And when a 1963 study showed the commission's hazard level for such contamination was "grossly underestimated," the AEC resisted attempts to change the standard, the report saqa.

The leukemia deaths were concentrated in children born in the mid-1950s and lived downwind of the tests, the report said.

As for thyroid abnormalities, a 1967 study showed they doubled among Utah residents between 1948 and 1962.

The panel said the AEC concealed information that might have threatened congressional or public support for nuclear weapons testing at the site.

"Because the agency charged with developing nuclear weapons was more concerned with that goal than with its other mission of protecting the public from injury, the government totally failed to provide adequate protection for the residents of the area," the report said.

The report was released by the House commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations after hearings into the consequences of the 223 atmospheric tests conducted at the Nevada site between January 1951 and August 1963. The energy department says 139 of the tests released radiation outside the test area.

The report drew a picture of mounting concern within the scientific community during those years over the effects of radiation.

'Die-in' marks first A-bomb

By The Associated Press

Church bells pealed in New Haven, Conn., and anti-nuclear protesters fell as if dead in the streets of Chicago as scattered demonstrations around the country marked the 35th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan, by the United States.

The bombing killed 100,000 people on Aug. 6, 1945, and 100,000 more died within a year from the effects of radiation. A second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki three days later.

About 25 protesters in downtown Chicago staged a "die-in," dropping to the ground as if felled by a nuclear blast, to stress that "use of that awesome power must not be repeated," said a spokesman for Mobilzation for Survival.

About 50 people stood in silent meditation on the New Haven, Conn., common, and church bells rang at 8:15 a.m., the time the bomb was dropped on the Japanese city.

In Sunnyvale, Calif., six people were arrested after strewing ashes and splashing blood on a building owned by Lockheed Corp., a contractor in the Trident missile program. The arrests were on charges ranging from trespassing to resisting arrest.

A 72-hour vigil began Wednesday night at the Lockheed gates in memory of the bombing victims. Demonstrators read prayers and the names of victims who died in the explosions.

One woman was arrested in Hartford, Conn., after she allegedly spread ashes in the lobby of United Technologies Corp., a military contractor.

In Colorado, 50 anti-nuclear protesters marched 15 kilometres from Boulder to the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant north of Golden and demanded that the plant close for four days to commemorate the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

A plant spokesman said no shutdown was planned.

In New York City, two clergymen were arrested for disorderly conduct Wednesday after they tried to enter the Riverside Research Institute, a nonprofit organization that has acknowledged working on ballistic missile defences.

The Westchester Peoples Action Coalition released 1,000 tagged balloons in Buchanan, N.Y., site of the Indian Point nuclear power plant, to demonstrate a possible path of radioactivity in the event of a nuclear accident at the plant.

A break through in heating efficiency

For those who have a masonry fireplace and know it sends most of the heat up the chimney, Fresh Air Fireplaces has the solution the Renaissance Circulation System Converter. It will transform your present masonry fireplace into an efficient, economical heat source. Available in a variety of sizes, it is easily installed in the firebox of most existing fireplaces.

Its operation is simple and unique — a controlled air intake at the bottom of the unit allows fresh air to enter the hollow bottom base, where it is heated, expands and rises in tubes that direct the heat into your home, not up the chimney.

The attractive glass doors serve two purposes: they eliminate most smoke, soot and sparks from entering your home and they prevent heated room air from escaping up the chimney.

Liverpool debates Beatle street idea

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Nearly two decades after the Beatles burst into world stardom with pop hits like Penny Lane, officials in their hometown meet today to consider naming city streets after John, Paul, George and Ringo. The session could prove to be a rocky road.

If approved, the plan would be the first time the council of Liverpool agreed to honor its most famous exports.

The council debate is expected to be as heated as one held in October 1977, when local fans campaigned for a statue of the four.

After a heated discussion, a model for the statue was approved. But efforts to raise money failed; the plan was dropped.

Percy Chony stands next to his demolished house in Port Maria (left). Scenes of desolation like that at right were everywhere today

Villagers return to shattered homes

PORT MARIA, Jamaica (UPI) — The people came down from high ground to their village by the sea to count the dead and pick up the pieces of their homes, shattered by the full fury of Hurricane Allen.

"I cry, I cry, I cry," said Ruby Thomas.

Nothing of her son Neville Tucker's beachfront home remained Wednesday except a slab of concrete floor and rubble. Her granddaughter, 1-year-old Sakia Tucker, apparently was swept out to sea during the night by storm tides. Sakia's cousin, 3-month-old Carry Wisenen, also was lost.

About 100 yards up a rocky beach that had been washed bare of sand, Madge Clean was missing, and so was her house. Only two low concrete walls and the floor of her house remained.

A few bathroom tiles clung to one wall. Twisted steel reinforcing rods stuck up from the foundations.

Mrs. Clean and the two children were among at least seven people who died in tiny St. Mary Parish at the northeast tip of Jamaica. It was hardest hit by the mighty hurricane's 215 km/h winds and torrents of water.

Another casualty in St. Mary Parish was the banana crop. "Banana production is wiped out," said Terry Gillette, a member of Parliament and a director of the government-owned banana exportation company. "It is very little less than 100 per cent gone."

St. Mary Parish, rugged and scenic with towering cliffs plummeting into the ocean, supplied about 30 percent of Jamaica bananas, a major export item, he said.

Jamaica had braced for its first hurricane since 1951 by ordering evacuation of low-lying areas near the teeming capital of Kingston.

But instead of coming ashore in St. Catherine Parish on the south coast, Allen changed course during the night and skirted the northern coast.

Damage in Kingston was minor, officials said.

In the lushly vegetated, mountainous interior, trees and utility poles lay across the winding roads, but there was little major damage.

Allen dealt most harshly with Port Maria, a hilly seaside town of 12,000 where playwright Noel Coward once lived.

The Outrum River, running through the tiny downtown area, overflowed and 5 to 6 feet of water poured into the streets, said 34-year-old Horace Thompson.

Water rose a foot in Thompson's house, trapping him there all night.

The flood waters left a litter of rocks, trash, limbs and broken parts of houses — doors, window freme streets.

On Banana Street, in a beachfront section called Little Bay, the flood waters lifted a dozen houses from their foundations and tossed them about like toys.

George Stoddard, 54, returning from an emergency shelter, found his green frame house 50 feet from where he left it. A corner of his porch sat on the street; his furniture was scattered inside.

"I think I'm lucky to have something left," he said. "It was way down by the water. Now it's up here."

garden notes

Stashed in the cupboard where I keep my garden catalogues is an old notebook which serves a very vital role in my garden operations — it's a journal of all the horticultural goofs I've committed over the years.

The primary purpose of the journal is to ensure an improvement in our family's gardening operations the next season. My notes include both failures not to be repeated and successes to be continued. I also include mention of the things that didn't get done this season but which certainly must be accomplished next year.

This notemaking is a productive activity because it is so easy during the winter to forget most of the little details of what the garden was like the previous season.

For example, one year in my haste to get in our favorite crop, peas, I decided to shorten the seeding process by scattering the seed quickly along the furrows rather than following the usual process of plunking each seed into the furrow, spacing the seeds by hand.

Well, the seeds came up all right, bright and green but they produced too quickly and died off before reaching any height at all. Now this failure was partly due to hot, dry weather at the critical time, which tends also to make the peas produce poor, fast crops before achieving full growth. However, my hasty seeding no doubt contributed to their poor performance.

There's a desperate note in my mistakes journal, outlined in bright red ink, reminding me to space the pea seeds. Also noted were the two varieties which worked best in our soil at that time and which we also foolishly deviated from that disastrous year.

Another favorite vegetable in our family's garden is the asparagus. For several years at our previous home we tried to develop an asparagus bed in a rather damp and shady corner of our garden, for lack of another spot. For a while, the asparagus did quite well, offering a summer-long attractive green bed of fethery fern to please the eye and add to our flower arrangements.

However, it soon became apparent that the plants were gradually dying out. This prompted me to give up another sunnier and more open corner of the garden to some new asparagus plants after which they really took off and produced well for us during the next few years and I expect they're still going strong.

On another occasion, our raspberries produced rather poorly one year and I couldn't blame it on the weather or any other natural factor other than my own negligence. So my notebook contains a reminder to thin out all the fruiting canes after the berries stop coming, as well as all the weak, spindly canes.

Radioactive cargo route cut off

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — A key route for shipments of radioactive cargo between Canada and the United States was closed Wednesday when the Ogdensburg Bridge and Port Authority voted to ban nuclear cargo from the Ogdensburg-Prescott International Bridge.

The narrow, two-lane bridge crosses the St. Lawrence River, linking Ogdensburg with Prescott, Ont.

The bridge has been a key route for the shipment of radioactive cargo between the two countries, especially the transport of radioactive fuel from the Chalk River, Ont.

THE COLONIST & TIMES

ITU launches layoff grievance

The International Typographical Union said Wednesday it intends to launch a grievance over the layoff of 24 of its members because of next month's merger of the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist.

ITU chapel chairman Tom Ferris said union members made their intentions clear Wednesday to the composing room foreman.

The merger plan would see 24 of the ITU's 96-member unit laid off.

The union said it refuses to accept the layoffs and will meet management representatives Friday.

Victoria Press president Colin McCullough said management has simply been notified by the ITU that the union intends to file a grievance and that the company has agreed to meet with its representatives.

A total of 61 employees, 53 full-time and 8 part-time, will be laid off at the end of the month because of the merger, which will see the appearance of a new paper, the Times-Colonist, Sept. 2.

Sewage treatment a top priority

Purchase of a sewage treatment site by the Capital Regional District should be a top priority, says regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil.

He told the CRD's community health and social services committee Wednesday he would like to see sewage treated and discharged through long outfalls but is prepared to be reasonable as long as health standards are met.

Arneil said he has been assured that the proposed outfalls on the south shore of the regional district will allow swimming and shellfish standards to be met. But he said he is not satisfied that this would be the case on the eastern shore.

"From the opinions I have had from the CRD engineers, this would only be so for the outfalls on the south shore and not the east. Furthermore, I feel it is imperative that an area be unequivocably set aside and available for a treatment plant of sufficient capacity should such be shown to be required to maintain the standards," Arneil said.

Arneil said the engineer who wrote the report on the proposed McMicking Point outfall indicated it might have little important effect on McNeill Bay while others feel it will have.

He said he has been assured that if the outfall results in standards not being met, the situation will be corrected.

"It is my understanding the outfall is necessary anyway as a relief emergency outfall for certain periods," Arneil said.

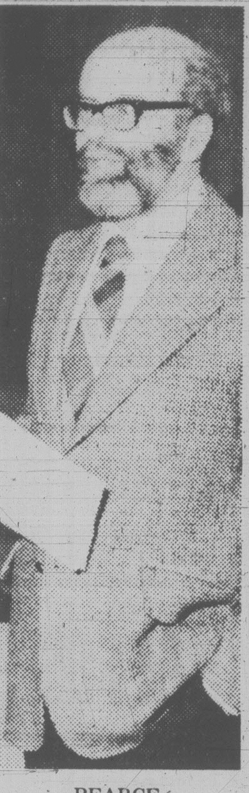
Salt Spring Island director, Yvette Valcourt said she recently visited friends on a sailboat in Ganges harbor and the stench of sewage was strong.

Saanich Ald. John Mika said he is a boater himself and the problem is that boaters are faced with a lack of onshore washroom facilities. He said, as an example, the public toilet near the Ganges wharf is usually either locked or out of commission.

Don Wakelyn, director of the public health division, said there is no effective legislation to cover dumping of sewage from boats because of jurisdictional problems.

The health staff was instructed to write the provincial government regarding jurisdiction and check facilities at both marinas and government wharves.

UVic physicist dies at 54



PEARCE
. . . helped found TRIUMF

Dr. Michael Pearce, chairman of the department of physics at the University of Victoria, died Tuesday in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Pearce, 54, was one of a group of scientists who helped found the TRIUMF project in Vancouver. He joined the university's physics department in 1963, becoming chairman in 1975.

Dr. Lyle Robertson, UVic physicist, said Pearce had a distinguished career as a scientist, teacher and administrator as well as being an accomplished musician and sportsman.

Earlier this year he and Dr. G.R. Mason and Dr. George Beer received a $120,000 grant from the National Science and Engineering Research Council to continue their studies at TRIUMF on the process of nuclear fission.

Pearce was born in Oxford, England. As a boy he moved to Montreal and later graduated with an honors bachelor of science degree from McGill University. His advanced degrees were attained at the University of British Columbia.

He is survived by his wife, Patricia, a daughter, Mrs. Jane Baldwin of London, Ont.; two sons, Geoffrey of Brussels, Belgium, and David of Vancouver; his father S.R. Pearce and a brother F.P. Pearce.

A memorial service will be held Friday at 3:30 p.m. at First Memorial Services Ltd., 4725 Falaise Drive. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the R.M. Pearce Memorial Fund, c/o University of Victoria Foundation, University of Victoria.

Upward's retirement delayed

Retiring water commissioner Ron Upward Wednesday saw his retirement date recede a little further into the future as the water board extended his employment once again until Nov. 1, 1981.

The board decided to start advertising for a replacement for Upward by January next year.

The commissioner said the fall a year from now would be the best time for him to retire because he needs at least three or four months of good weather to show his successor around.

Originally, Upward was due to step down this year after being with the district since it was formed in 1949.

Breweries' demand disgraceful: union

A move by three major breweries to have locked-out employees make immediate pre-payments for insurance and health plans has been called disgraceful by a Victoria union official.

Ray Wainwright, president of the Victoria local of the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union, said the notice from the breweries' bargaining association has created fear among employees' families of a possible loss of benefits.

"It's an unfair pressure tactic," he said.

In past disputes, companies continued to make payments to such employee benefit plans, deducting the money from employees' future wages.

"This kind of action on the part of the brewers' association goes beyond the bounds of accepted pressure tactics during negotiations and I think it's disgraceful that they put this financial burden on the employees who they have locked out," Wainwright said.

The 1,520 members of the union were locked out of the Labatt, Molson and Carling-O'Keefe breweries after contract talks broke down.

The breweries have offered $1-an-hour increases in each year of a three-year contract, but the workers are holding out for $1.05 an hour in each year of a two-year pact.

Meanwhile, B.C. pub owners left high and dry by the brewery shutdown will be allowed to join the line-ups of thirsty beer buffs for a share of imported beer coming into liquor stores.

A spokesman for the provincial liquor distribution branch said Wednesday retail licensees will be allowed to buy up to 10 cases of beer a week, but like consumers they'll have to find a liquor store with beer in stock first.

Pubs and other licensees were cut off altogether to conserve stocks when a contract dispute closed the province's three major breweries July 25.

Tennis anyone, bowling in a hole-in-ground?

It would make a great tennis court-cum-bowling alley with plenty of parking besides.

The 75-year-old Smith's Hill reservoir in the northern district of Victoria could be used for all of these some day.

The 450-foot square cement hole is 25-feet deep and open to the skies. It isn't required as part of Greater Victoria's water system but is kept full of water to prevent the curious from falls and injuries.

It also has some use a catch basin in the city when pressure control valves function too slowly and some water blows off into the reservoir, water commissioner Ron Upward said.

On Thursday, the Greater Victoria water board decided to leave the reservoir as is for the next five to 10 years and reconsider its recreational possibilities at that time.

Upward said eventually a working reservoir may be needed for this part of the city and southern Saanich if population density increases, but only one-third of the present reservoir would be needed.

"It could be used for a bowling alley or tennis courts," he said.

"How about a parking garage?" asked Mayor Bill Tindall.

The surrounding property was turned over to the city for a park but the reservoir itelf remains in water district hands.

City makes offer to buy timber land

The Greater Victoria Water Board decided Wednesday to get back into land-buying to ensure that the existing profitable system of logging watershed timber to pay for construction projects continues for this generation's children and grandchildren.

Water commissioner Ron Upward was authorized to make an offer for the southern part of Lot 87, a 1,600-acre parcel west of Shawnigan Lake which remained in private hands when the water district bought the Sooke watershed in 1911-15.

It was logged by Shawnigan Lumber and later reverted to the Crown for taxes.

The southern 856 acres, less 102 acres which now comprise a B.C. Hydro power line right-of-way, are desirable because water drains into Sooke Lake, source of Greater Victoria's drinking water, Upward said.

The board last year established a policy of spending 80 per cent of logging profits on construction projects and 20 per cent on land purchases, but none has been bought so far.

We're not ready for a war

World's military strategists see a major confrontation by 1983 against the Soviet Union but much remains to be done before Canada can defend itself

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Forces, under-manned, over-committed and under-equipped, are not prepared for war.

The good news, says Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne, is that there is no threat of a major conflict at present and, in an emergency, it wouldn't take long "to get what we need to defend ourselves."

Both Lamontagne and former defence minister Allan McKinnon agree the armed forces would be hard-pressed to uphold commitments or defend its territory in the face of major aggression.

But while Lamontagne says the country could respond quickly, McKinnon forecasts the next world war would be a "come-as-you-are affair" and much more remains to be done to bolster the country's defences and capabilities.

The military has gained added public attention because of a wave of sabre-rattling after the Soviet incursion in Afghanistan last winter.

The United States Congress is boosting defence spending and it's an issue in the American election campaign.

Maj.-Gen. Rene Gutknecht, Canada's newly-appointed military representative at NATO headquarters in Brussels, said in Montreal recently that Western military strategists are predicting a major armed confrontation with the Soviet Union, probably in 1983.

There has been war talk before — the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, for example — and tensions have later died down. But NATO countries have begun modernizing their forces and nuclear arsenals in the face of what they say is growing Soviet military might.

Canada's re-equipment program is already well under way. The government bought 128 new Leopard tanks from West Germany and has signed a contract to acquire 137 F-18A fighter planes from McDonnell Douglas Corp. in the U.S. Otta is also looking at bids to build six new naval frigates.

After a steady manpower decline in the 1970s, the government has authorized a 4,700-man increase by about 1983. Gen. Ramsey Withers, chief of defence staff, says it's likely to take longer than that because the forces are growing at a rate of only 400 men a year.

The forces are recovering from a long decline through the era of detente in the late 1960s and early 1970s. But McKinnon, who was defence minister in the short-lived Progressive Conservative government, says a lot remains to be done.

The forces are "over-committed to a terrible degree" — too many assignments overseas and in North America to handle in an emergency, he said.

Canada is committed to sending about 4,000 troops to Norway when that country is on the verge of a major conflict. It also has a 3,200-man mechanized brigade and three fighter squadrons in Germany, participates in the NATO naval defence system and contributes to peacekeeping in Cyprus as well as defending Canadian borders.

But when there is chance of a conflict with the Soviet Union in Norway, "that's precisely the time when we would have to enlarge the forces greatly and send off all our existing troops to all these commitments and leave no one to look after the . . . mobilization, and recruitment and training which has to go now," McKinnon says.

He says that when he was defence minister last winter he asked the defence department how many extra men could be mobilized if war broke out today. He was told 16,000 persons could be added immediately to the 80,000-man regular force and about 60,000 in a year. Training is a major reason for the time it takes to build the forces.

Terry Sargeant, New Democratic defence critic, suggests Canada's European contribution should be more specialized — all-land or all-air rather than a mixture of both.

Former U.S. defence secretary James Schlesinger said in Calgary in March that Canada and its allies have long depended on U.S. military strength to counter the Soviet threat and have forgotten about their own security.

The forces have shrunk considerably since 1960. There were 119,597 persons in uniform in 1960, 47 combat vessels, 374 tanks and 420 combat aircraft. Now there are 80,298 servicemen, 26 vessels, 128 tanks and 214 planes.

The study group on armed forces unification reported this year that defence spending accountd for about 20 per cent of the federal budget in 1965 and this has since dropped to about 8.6 per cent.

The government promised two years ago to increase defence spending three per cent a year for five years. That increase was to be over and above inflation.

That target was not met in the first year, but spending now is rising.

Naval experts are upset at delays in the $1.6-billion frigate program, now months behind schedule. Rear-Admiral Robert Timbrell, former head of naval forces, says the navy is actually seven or eight years behind because of the failure to go ahead with plans to build more destroyers after the last vessels were delivered in the early 1970s.

Now the forces are in the midst of a costly refitting program for aging destroyers to keep them afloat until new vessels are launched in the mid-to-late 1980s.

McKinnon and Sargeant say the armed forces and the department need further reorganization. Lamontagne is involving the top field commanders of air, sea and land elements more deeply in department policy decisions.

Withers says 11.5 to 12 per cent of servicemen leave the forces every year. But he had been told by businessmen this was unusually low by private industry standards.

The government is looking, too, at the unification study group's report which recommended changes in the unified force, an explosive issue when the single armed forces structure was created in the 1960s.

Allen gaining strength, aims for Gulf

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hurricane Allen, gaining fury and described as the strongest on record in the western Caribbean, churned toward Mexico's Yucatan Channel today on a path that could put the killer storm off the U.S. Gulf coast by the weekend.

It left behind at least 71 dead and extensive devastation on the fourth day of its rampage through the Caribbean.

Meanwhile, offshore workers spotted a body in the Gulf of Mexico today near where a helicopter with 13 Americans aboard is missing in the storm-tossed seas off Louisiana's southern coast. The 13 were among hundreds of oil drilling rig and production platform workers evacuated in anticipation of the storm.

At 6 a.m. PDT, the U.S. National Weather Service said Allen, with top winds of 273 km/h instead of 249 km/h recorded three hours earlier, was centred 105 nautical miles east-northeast of Cozumel, Mexico.

"Extremely dangerous Allen is wobbling toward the Yucatan channel," the weather service said, adding that the storm strengthened through the night to make it the strongest ever to reach the western Caribbean. It was moving west northwest at about 25 km/h.

"The projected track of the centre will bring it through the Yucatan channel but the strengthening and minor wobbles could result in the centre passing over either the extreme western tip of Cuba or the northeast tip of the Yucatan peninsula," the weather service said. "This should bring extreme winds to both of these areas."

The Texas-Louisiana coast is about 660 nautical miles northwest of the Yucatan and appears to be in the path of Allen, which has basically followed a north-northwest route since building to hurricane force off the eastern Caribbean island of St. Lucia early Monday morning. However, there is no certainty the storm will continue on the same track.

Coast guardsmen using high-powered lights searched the stormy Gulf of Mexico through the night for the helicopter, which was reported missing when it failed to arrive at 7 p.m. Wednesday at an airport 80 nautical miles away from the production platform. A coast guard spokesman said he knew nothing more than the report that a body was spotted by people aboard a civilian work boat.

The Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. said five of its employees were aboard, along with the pilot and seven workers from various offshore oil service companies.

Mexican rig and production workers were also evacuated from Mexico's oil-rich Campeche Bay and port authorities suspended all navigation there and in the Yucatan peninsula, warning ocean-going ships to take "maximum precautions."

The hurricane's latest victims were reported by Havana radio, which said three people were electrocuted — a 30-year-old man and his 14-year-old boy in eastern Cuba and a 36-year-old man in the island country's 's central region.

Including the three Cubans, Allen's over-all death toll stands at 71.

B.C. gov't job freeze thawing

The provincial government's freeze on civil service hiring has begun to thaw before it ever solidified.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday he has started widening the areas of government operations exempted from the freeze.

When he announced the freeze — Curtis called it at the time a "crude instrument of restraint" — three weeks ago, the minister said three ministries — environment, forests and lands, parks and housing — would not be affected.

Curtis now says that within the last 10 days the ministries of agriculture and the provincial secretary have been added to the exemption list and notice of exemption is on its way to yet another, unspecified ministry.

As other belt-tightening measures take effect, the hiring thaw will continue to spread, Curtis told the legislature.

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich wondered why the freeze was announced in the first place since the government apparently has no intention of proceeding with it.

"There is no point to it," said Stupich. "The government either does not know where it is going or it's so far behind in its accounting that it has no idea what's happening."

Curtis originally estimated the government would save $80 million if the hiring freeze was carried through to the end of the fiscal year on March 31.

Stupich said the most that could be accomplished is a saving of $20 million — a drop in the bucket in a $5.8-billion budget.

He reiterated his contention the government is pleading poverty only to convince Ottawa to cough up more money to finance some of Premier Bill Bennett's pet projects.

Cancer threat is everywhere

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seems that everytime you pick up a newspaper, there's a new report about some everyday item that may cause cancer.

Now, the U.S. government says it's true — there's no way to avoid cancer-causing agents.

The report issued Wednesday by the federal department of health and human services said that almost all Americans are exposed — at low levels — to some type of carcinogen.

Cancer, the country's second-largest killer, may take 400,000 lives this year and is one of the most worried-about diseases. The report came in response to a congressional directive to survey all known and suspected carcinogens to which a large number of Americans are exposed.

The study examined 26 drugs, compounds and processes that have been studied by panels of international experts.

Even though the list is long, said Dr. David Rall, it is incomplete.

Rall, director of the national toxicology program, said, "The next report is planned to cover 100 carcinogens and within two years, the report will include all known important carcinogens."

The report found:

— Asbestos is so widely used that the entire population is exposed in some fashion, including about 2.5 million workers who have some daily occupational exposure.

— Benzene, another carcinogen, occurs widely in petroleum and coal tar distillates. It has been used as a paint solvent and in adhesives, dyes and chemical laboratories. It is also used to make other chemicals, plastics, detergents and some pesticides.

Jetliner crashes in Atlantic

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania (AP) — A Romanian jetliner carrying 164 Romanian fishermen crashed in the Atlantic early today just off the coast of this West African country, officials said. Witnesses said as many as 100 people may have been saved.

The official Mauritanian news agency said the jumbo jet of the Russian-made Tupolev series plunged into the sea with no indication the pilot had sent a distress signal.

There was no word on how many crew members were aboard the scheduled flight of Romania's Tarom airlines, but officials said the passenger manifest listed 164 fishermen aboard and no other passengers.

The fishermen were en route to Nouadhibou to relieve the crews on the huge fishing boats that ply the waters off Africa's west coast, a changeover made routinely every three months, officials said.

Cause of the crash was under investigation. The weather in the area was described as acceptable.

Preliminary reports from the Mauritainian news agency said only 20 fishermen were saved. But later, the French airline UTA at Nouadhibou quoted witnesses as saying there were at least 25 known injured and another 70 or 75 passengers who may also have escaped.

No official figures were available.

For unexplained reasons, the plane dipped to the right on approach and plunged into the sea.

A boat from the Mauritanian navy rushed to the scene as did two trawlers, he added. The boats arrived before the plane had completely broken up and with two-thirds of the fuselage intact and still above water.

In addition to those pulled onto the boats, a number of passengers also managed to swim to shore, complicating the task of compiling exact casualty figures, the official said.

The worst single-plane accident was the crash of a Turkish DC-10 near Paris on March 3, 1974, in which 346 people died.

No I didn't: McGeer You did so: reporter

VANCOUVER (CP) — It began with a cabinet minister who gave a news conference, then said a CBC reporter with questions on another matter was invading his privacy.

It ended with a CBC television cameraman on the floor, Science Minister Pat McGeer denying allegations he knocked the man down, and the reporter saying "look at the film."

Reporter Larry Rose said that McGeer knocked down cameraman Steve Rendall while he attempted to film McGeer's refusal Wednesday to answer questions on a recent consultant's report about a fixed link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

McGeer was at the University of B.C. to announce a one-year, $525,900 grant toward costs of a sttudy of conversion of gasoline-engine cars to natural gas.

The film shows Rose pursuing McGeer down a corridor, asking questions, McGeer whirling towards the camera, and the cameraman going down.

Rendall then photographed a tussle between McGeer and Rose, with Rose shouting: "You don't touch a cameraman."

Then McGeer turned to the camera again, thrust his hand into the lens, retreated behind a door, and accused the CBC team of invading his privacy.

McGeer later apologized, but denied knocking anyone down.

"I didn't push him. I put my hand up (to block the camera) and he fell down." He said his hand rested on Rendall's shoulder.

"You don't put a hand on a cameraman," said Rose.

McGeer was refusing to answer questions concerning provincial consultant Garth Edge's report suggesting a fixed link between the mainland and Vancouver Island is not feasible at this time.

West loses again: Phillips

The federal government's refusal to provide $3 a tonne toward a transportation subsidy on coal exported from northeastern B.C. is another instance of the West losing out, says Industry Minister Don Phillips.

Ottawa's decision not to help out on the subsidy — it already has committed money for port development and upgrading of rail facilities — was announced Wednesday at a news conference in Vancouver by Senator Ray Perrault, B.C.'s representative in the federal cabinet.

He said the federal position was not taken to kill the proposed billion-dollar coal deal with Japanese steel industry interests, but because the project should not be supported at taxpayers' expense.

B.C. had asked the federal government to contribute $3 toward a $5-a-tonne subsidy to cover transportation costs in an effort to lower the price of the coal.

The Japanese have offered $75 to $77 a tonne, but Canadian coal companies insist they need $86 a tonne to make their operations profitable.

Perrault said approval of the B.C. request would have meant taxpayers subsidizing coal exports to the tune of $200 million in the

Ranchhouse ripper sought revenge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who used a chainsaw to rip up his 2,440-square-metre, $1.5 million log ranchhouse near Ashcroft, B.C., says he did it to prevent the company that had won possession of the property from getting it.

"They might take my land and everything else I had but they weren't going to take my home," Charles Moar said defiantly in a telephone interview Wednesday from Portland, Ore.

"I had two choices: I could give it to a company which I considered unethical or I could destroy it. My family and I spent 3½ years building that house and lived 20 years on the ranch. There was no way I was going to let the Heller company get the house."

The Walter E. Heller Co. of Canada, with head offices in Chicago, gained possession Friday of the 7,000-acre Moar ranch about 60 kilometres west of Kamloops when the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver ordered foreclosure against the property for non-payment of a claim of more than $4 million.

Moar's trouble began in 1967 when he needed $300,000 to lay irrigation works on his ranch. He used a lumber company he owned, Wolverine Lumber Co., as collateral.

He said the company was successful and had large quantities of logs already decked in the woods, but when he was unable to make payments on his loan, Heller gained control of the lumber company and "ran it into the ground," charging the losses against Moar's land.

"It was my company in name only," Moar said. "They put me completely out of decision making. They lost a fortune and charged it to me."

Debts mounted until Moar found himself about $4.5 milion in debt.

He says he consulted lawyers but was told it would cost up to $500 a day to fight Heller. "If I had the money to fight them I would have fought them."

Moar said he was told to sell the land, which he says was appraised at $7 million to $8 million in 1973, but wanted to sell it in one block. He says he at least two prospective buyers were told by Heller to wait until the company gained control of the land before buying.

Moar said he is not anxious to return to B.C. until RCMP make a decision on whether he will be charged.

New York

Stock prices gained more ground in heavy trading Thursday, extending Wednesday's late upsurge.

With Wednesday's rally, the market broke out of a neutral trend that had set in almost a week before.

Analysts noted that many traders had been looking for a downward correction in stock prices after their sharp rally since early spring.

But no such such decline materialized, and traders evidently concluded that the rally still had further to go.

General Motors picked up 1⅛ to $53. A Wall Street Journal article on the company said it could emerge from the current recession "even bigger and stronger than ever."

Sav-On Drugs jumped 5¼ to -17⅝. Jewel Cos. set a plan to acquire the company.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Alcan Aluminium rose 1 to $33¼, Ashland Oil ½ to $36½ and McIntyre Mines ½ to $73⅞.

Campbell Red Lake fell ½ to $56½ and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting ⅛ to $24⅝.

London

The London stock market was firm near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index gained 4.9 to 478.0.

Industrials, oils and banks advanced.

ADULT BASIC EDUCATION

Camosun makes available a number of programs for the adult who never completed school and the College's educational advisors can help you to determine which program may be best for you. Financial assistance may be available through the Canada Employment Centre or the Ministry of Human Resources. For details on these programs, contact the Counselling/Admissions Centre at 592-1281 local 227.

ADULT ACADEMIC UPGRADING

ADULT BASIC EDUCATION LEVEL I

This program is designed to help adults who lack the most fundamental reading, writing, and arithmetic skills. Instruction begins at the student's real level whether that is actual or functional illiteracy, recognizing and understanding numbers or operations with numbers. Instruction is individualized and teaching groups are kept as small as possible.

Admission is by a combination of placement testing and personal interview. The applicant must be 17 years of age or older. Please note that this program is not for people who require English as a second language.

ADULT BASIC EDUCATION LEVELS 2/3

Our adult academic upgrading programs are designed to serve several purposes. The adult who hasn't finished high school can:

- achieve the grade 10 standing required to get into certain trade or career training programs; or

- upgrade skills to the level required to enter Camosun's College Prep courses (grades 11 and 12 equivalence) or our pre-vocational grade 12 equivalent (B.T.S.D. Level 4).

No previous academic standing is required because admission is by placement test; this process allows the adult to begin at the most suitable level. The courses are self-paced so adult students can progress at their own speed. Most students completing the program are successful in writing the provincial government's G.E.D. Tests.

Currently, Level 2/3 is available at two locations:
1) Our Langford site - serving the Western Communities
2) The Lansdowne Campus - serving the city

Level 2/3 is available both day and evening on a full-time or part-time basis. Applicants must be 17 years of age or older and have been out of the public school system for at least one year.

B.T.S.D. LEVEL 4

This program is designed to upgrade basic academic skills in as short a time as possible to the grade 12 level in order to meet employers' educational requirements or to prepare for enrolment in a specific vocational training program. Entrance into the program is by placement test. Applicants must be at least 17 years old and have been out of the public school system for at least one year. B.T.S.D. 4 is NOT a preparation for university transfer or two-year career programs.

EMPLOYMENT ORIENTATION FOR WOMEN (E.O.W.)

Do you want to do something but you're not sure what?
Are you uncertain where to start?
Do you feel you are ready to go back to school or get a job but you are not certain if these goals can be balanced against your family responsibilities?
Would you like a chance to meet 15 other women in a similar situation?
If you answered yes to any of these questions then the E.O.W. program might be for you. It is designed to help you build your self-confidence and find out more about yourself. It will help you set realistic goals and find out how to reach these goals. The program includes job search techniques, basic introduction to typing or a typing refresher, and an individualized academic review. There are no educational restrictions and the program is open to women 18 years of age and over.
